

Information about the authors

 <https://doi.org/10.1075/aals.20.con>

Pages vii–x of

Innovation in Language Learning and Teaching: Historical perspectives

Edited by Richard Smith and Tim Giesler

[AILA Applied Linguistics Series, 20] 2023. x, 220 pp.

© John Benjamins Publishing Company

This electronic file may not be altered in any way. For any reuse of this material written permission should be obtained from the publishers or through the Copyright Clearance Center (for USA: www.copyright.com).

For further information, please contact rights@benjamins.nl or consult our website at benjamins.com/rights

Information about the authors

Marta Banducci Rahe is Professor of English Language and the Coordinator of an extension project whose purpose is to offer language courses to the local community in the Arts, Language and Communication Faculty, Universidade Federal de Mato Grosso do Sul, Brazil. She completed her Master's and Doctorate degrees in History of Education, focusing on the history of foreign language learning and teaching and material culture. Her main fields of interest are history of language learning and teaching, and history of material cultures of schooling, with a focus on textbooks, language subjects, and school cultures. Currently she is researching the history of bilingual education and the biographies of language teachers.

Email: banduccirahe@uol.com.br

Lucia Berti is a postdoctoral researcher at the University of Milan, where she teaches English linguistics. Her research focuses primarily on the early and late modern periods, specifically on the history of foreign language teaching and lexicography (English and Italian), Anglo-Italian relations, and the history and development of scientific periodicals. Recent relevant publications include book chapters on Italian borrowings in Giuseppe Baretto's dictionaries (2020, 2023), an essay on Ph. A. Nemnich's Universal European dictionary of merchandise (2019), and a co-authored paper on Moses Santagnello as a teacher of Italian in early 19th-century England (2021).

Email: lucia.berti@unimi.it

Sabine Doff is Professor of English Language Education at Bremen University, Germany. Her research interests include the history and historiography of foreign language education, in particular English language teaching in Europe (18th–20th centuries), methods and methodological questions in teaching English as a foreign language, curriculum studies and gender studies in language education. She completed her PhD and Habilitation at Ludwig-Maximilians-University Munich and has worked as a teacher, researcher and teacher trainer in the field of language education. Among her recent publications are Media meets diversity @ school (with Joanna Pfingsthorn, wvt, 2020) and Policies and practice in language learning and teaching: 20th-century perspectives (with Richard Smith, Amsterdam University Press, 2022).

Email: doff@uni-bremen.de

Mariarosaria Gianninoto obtained her doctorate in Asian Studies from the University of Naples “L’Orientale” in 2005 and her accreditation to supervise research (HDR) in linguistics at EHESS, Paris in 2017, with a Habilitation volume on the hybridization of Chinese and Western linguistic traditions (Hybridation des traditions linguistiques chinoise et occidentale, 2017). She is currently Professor of Chinese Linguistics at the Paul Valéry University in Montpellier, having been a lecturer in Chinese at the Stendhal University in Grenoble and at Grenoble Alpes University (2008–2018). She has co-authored a volume on the history of Chinese linguistics (Storia della linguistica cinese, 2012) and authored several articles on the history of Chinese linguistic studies and the history of Chinese language teaching.

Email: mariarosaria.gianninoto@univ-montp3.fr

Tim Giesler has been a Lecturer in English Language Education at Bremen University, Germany, since 2010. Prior to this, he worked as a secondary school teacher of (mainly) English and History. His main research interest is the history of teaching English in institutional contexts in Germany, a field in which he completed his Ph.D. thesis (published as Die Formation des institutionellen Englischunterrichts (wvt, 2018). He is also interested in Content and Language Integrated Learning, teaching literary content and teaching English in heterogeneous contexts. Recent publications include book chapters and articles on the history of English teaching and the books Die große Frage (with Sabine Doff and Mareike Tödter, wvt, 2019) and Masters of reflective practice (with Joanna Pfingsthorn, wvt, 2020).

Email: giesler@uni-bremen.de

Reinhard Heuberger is an Assistant Professor in the Department of English at the University of Innsbruck (Austria). His research focuses on lexicography (learner’s dictionaries and online dictionaries), ecolinguistics (and human–animal studies), and English dialectology. He was the co-director of the government-funded project SPEED (2006–2010), and also co-directed its follow-up project EDD Online (2011–2014), both concerned with the digitization and investigation of Joseph Wright’s English dialect dictionary.

Email: reinhard.heuberger@uibk.ac.at

Giovanni Iamartino is Professor of the History of English at the University of Milan. His main research interests focus on the history of Anglo–Italian relations, translation studies and the history of translation, and the history of English lexicography and linguistic codification in general. His recent publications in the latter field include essays and book chapters on the representation of women in John Kersey’s dictionaries of the English language (2020), European cross-currents in English lexicography (in The Cambridge companion to English dictionaries, 2020),

Giuseppe Baretto's revision of Giral Delpino's Spanish–English dictionary of 1763 (2020), culture-bound words and borrowings in Baretto's English–Italian dictionary (2021, 2023), and Moses Santagnello as a teacher of Italian in early 19th-century England (2021).

Email: giovani.iamartino@unimi.it

Friederike Klippel is Professor Emerita of English Language Education at Ludwig-Maximilians-University Munich in Germany. Her research areas range from the history of language learning and teaching to language teaching methodology, classroom research, intercultural education, and teacher education and professional development, and her publications include Keep talking (Cambridge University Press, 1984), a comprehensive historical study of learning and teaching English in 18th- and 19th-century Germany (Englischlernen im 18. und 19. Jahrhundert, Nodus, 1994), handbooks on teaching English at various levels, a large number of articles on different aspects of the history of language teaching, and a handbook on foreign language research methods (Forschungsmethoden in der Fremdsprachendidaktik, 2nd ed., Narr, 2022, with D. Caspari, M. Legutke and K. Schramm).

Email: klippel@lmu.de

Stefania Nuccorini is Honorary Professor of English Language and Translation at Roma Tre University, and a lecturer on learner lexicography for the European Master in Lexicography. Her main research interests focus on lexicology, phraseology and lexicography, and their role in the history of English language learning and teaching. Recent publications include “Usage, authority and stance in the lexicographic management of English” (2020); “The didactic purposes of John Millhouse's Italian–English, English–Italian new pronouncing and explanatory dictionary” (2020); “Lexicographic metalanguage as (a) specialized language” (2020); “Digging into a thesaurus for treasures: Conceptual maps in the Longman language activator (2020); and “English dictionary criticism in two lexicographical specialist journals” (2017).

Email: stefania.nuccorini@uniroma3.it

Luciana Pedrazzini is an Associate Professor of Second Language Education and TESOL at the University of Milan. Her main research interests are in the areas of Second Language Acquisition and pedagogy, history of language teaching, and teacher education. She is the co-author (with Andrea Nava) of Second language acquisition in action: Principles from practice (Bloomsbury, 2018) and the co-founder (also with Andrea Nava) of the Italy ELT Archive at the University of Milan.

Email: luciana.pedrazzini@unimi.it

Shi PU is a Lecturer at the Beijing Foreign Studies University National Research Centre for Foreign Language Education. She received her PhD degree in Second Language Education from the University of Cambridge in 2016. She is particularly interested in the historical and transnational development of prevailing pedagogical concepts such as “learner autonomy” and “critical thinking”, hoping to discover how such concepts are fed into dominant educational discourse in China, and how they mediate local educational practice. In 2022, she published a book entitled Critical thinking in academic writing: A cultural approach (Routledge) and her recent articles have appeared in Journal of English for Academic Purposes, Language, Culture and Curriculum, The Asia-Pacific Education Researcher, and Chinese Journal of Applied Linguistics.

Email: pu.shi@bfsu.edu.cn

Richard Smith is Professor of ELT and Applied Linguistics at the University of Warwick, UK, where he established the Warwick ELT Archive in 2002. He researches in the field of History of Language Learning and Teaching and Applied Linguistics, with a particular focus on TESOL/ELT, and is founder and co-convenor of the AILA (International Association of Applied Linguistics) Research Network on History of Language Language Learning and Teaching (HoLLT.net). He is also known for his work on local pedagogies in ELT/TESOL, including approaches to teaching English in ‘difficult circumstances’ in countries of the Global South, pedagogy of autonomy, including language teacher autonomy, and capacity-building in ELT/TESOL research, including teacher-research.

Email: R.C.Smith@warwick.ac.uk

Shona Whyte is a Professor in Applied Linguistics at Université Côte d’Azur, France. Her work at the research laboratory Bases, Corpus, Language (BCL) focuses on second language (L2) studies including acquisition and learning, technology-mediated interaction, and language teacher education. Recent projects involve virtual exchange with young EFL pupils (RAVEL), and technology-mediated pedagogy in higher education (SHOUT4HE). She is active in the French applied linguistics association AFLA and the L2 research network ReAL2, and is associate editor for the ReCALL journal.

Email: Shona.WHYTE@unice.fr