The theme of this book originated in an International Symposium on “Methodologies for the Study of Consciousness”, organised by Max Velmans, Janet Richardson, and Arthur Zajonc, funded and hosted by the Fetzer Institute, Michigan, USA, in September 1996. The intensive four days of presentations and discussions were published in the symposium proceedings Methodologies for the Study of Consciousness: A New Synthesis (eds. J. Richardson and M. Velmans), The Fetzer Institute, 1997. Some of the chapters in this book have been developed from the proceedings; others are entirely new. I would like to thank the original participants David Abram, Bernard Baars, Ron Brady, John Crook, Peter Fenwick, David Fontana, Brian Goodwin, Guven Guzeldere, Rom Harré, Ivan Havel, Jane Henry, Elizabeth McCormick, Millar Mair, John Pickering, Peter Reason, Janet Richardson, Marilyn Schlitz, Alwyn Scott, Gregory Simpson, Richard Stevens, Charles Tart, Frances Vaughan, and Arthur Zajonc for their inspiration and wisdom, and The Fetzer Institute, particularly Arthur Zajonc and Chuck Willis, for their encouragement and continued support. My special thanks are also due to my partner Janet Richardson who helped to formulate and plan this project.
