I wish to express my gratitude to the great number of people who assisted me in various selfless ways during the preparation and writing of this book. First and foremost, I would like to thank Friedrich Lenz for his support throughout all stages of this project. Without your advice, wisdom and mentorship this project would not have been possible.

I would also like to thank Ulrich Heid, Rolf Kreyer and Kristin Kersten who read earlier versions of the manuscript, gave me invaluable feedback and freely offered their help in ways too numerous to mention here. For comments, discussions and interdisciplinary advice I am deeply grateful to Christina Womser-Hacker, Elke Montanari, the late Anette Sabban and Klaus Schubert, as well as the members and delegates at various ICAME conferences.

Special thanks go to Kristian Folta-Schoofs and the members and staff of his neurodidactic team for their immense support during the experimental stages of this project. The interdisciplinary approach this book takes, was only possible due to your generous help, the insightful feedback from a psychologist's perspective and your material contribution at considerable expense to your resources. In a similar vein I would like to thank Janet-Marie McLaughlin who proofread the original manuscript; all remaining blunders and infelicities are naturally mine. Thanks go also to the participants in the study, my colleagues at the department of English Language and Literature at the University of Hildesheim, the native speaker raters, the series editor of Bilingual Processing and Acquisition and two anonymous reviewers.

Finally, I would like to thank my family: my parents Ulrike and Bernd-Rüdiger for their unfailing love and support and my daughter Mara Moësha for being the greatest daughter anyone could wish for. Last but not least, I wish to thank my beloved wife Manuela for her patience, love and support and for remaining a constant center of gravity throughout all the ups and downs in a scholar's life. To her this book is dedicated.
