Acknowledgements

I would like to express my thanks to all those who have offered advice and suggestions concerning matters of content as well as to those who helped me with preparing the final form of the manuscript. In this I would like to mention first of all my colleagues at the Institute of Classical Studies of the Czechoslovak Academy of Sciences.

This study was largely written during extended stays at the Linguistic Institute of the University of Bonn which were financed by a scholarship granted by the Heinrich Hertz Foundation, to whose President, Dr. Lingens, I owe a special debt of gratitude. My particular thanks are due to Professor Karl Horst Schmidt, Director of the Institute, for his continuing interest in the progress of my work. His stimulating proposals concerning the typology of Indo-European were among the fundamental ideas guiding my research. I am also very much indebted to other colleagues from the Institutes of Linguistics in Bonn and Cologne, especially to Reinhard Stempel and to Hans-Jürgen Sasse, whose contributions to the discussion of concept of 'IE subject' and related phenomena as well to language typology in general have been of great importance for my conclusions. The opportunity for the presentation of preliminary findings and for subsequent discussion at the Universities of Bologna, Vienna, and Bonn too provided me with additional stimulation for my work.

Finally, I would like to express my thanks to all those who helped me with the English style of the present volume in its various stages of completion, especially to Karin Hlaváček (Bonn), Ludmila Kollmanová (Prague), Timothy Bowen (East Sussex), Chris Searles (Cologne), and the anonymous readers who commented on the pre-final revision. The list of my benefactors is far from complete, I'm afraid. However, I feel I must make mention of the kind cooperation and support received from Konrad Koerner, editor of this series, throughout the different phases of readying the text for publication. Remaining shortcomings remain my sole responsibility.
