Acknowledgements

I would like to thank Prof. Konrad Koerner, editor of the series, for his willingness to hear and his unlimited patience and availability.

I also wish to express my gratitude to “my authors” for their cooperation and patience and to the following for permission for the use of copyright material: American Ethnologist and the American Anthropological Association; American Speech and the University of Alabama Press; Journal of Linguistics and Language in Society and Cambridge University Press; Newbury House; Plenum Press; Linguistische Berichte and Westdeutscher Verlag; Sage Publications, New-Delhi. An appropriate, detailed acknowledgement appears with each paper reproduced in this collection.

I am also grateful to Jean-François Couturier, Benoît Forest and David Parkinson. Without their technical help, this volume would have never seen the light of day.

Last, but not least, I am grateful to Vijai Mathur, who got this collection started, Robin Gold, who uncomplainingly fed her computer texts they didn’t really want, and N.S. Prabhu, whose valuable comments helped me improve the Introduction.
