ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The present book is an extensive revision of my doctoral dissertation. While many of the analyses and observations go back to the original work, the present book can safely be said to be a complete rewrite of the original manuscript. The theoretical descriptions have been pruned to what is absolutely essential and the descriptive material has been restructured to better clarify my own cognitive lexical-paradigmatic approach to causative constructions in English, basically a synthesis of cognitive grammar and systemic-functional grammar.

It is my pleasant duty to thank the many people who, in one way or another, have contributed to both my doctoral dissertation and this book. It is impossible to list all these people, yet I would like to thank some of them explicitly.

I wish to thank Dirk Geeraerts, promotor of my Ph.D. dissertation, for having continually challenged and stimulated me with his methodological concerns and his persistently careful criticism. While less directly involved in the rewriting process, his comments on first drafts of this book have been much appreciated.

I am grateful to my Brygida Rudzka-Ostyn, co-promotor of my Ph.D. dissertation, for her elaborate comments on both the contents and the presentation of my work. Her extensive feed-back, energy and enthusiasm have been a major impetus to my work.

I also thank Kristin Davidse for her careful comments on substantial parts of this work, which helped me considerably in the delineation of my own approach.

I am indebted to the department of Linguistics of the K.U. Leuven for offering me an assistantship during which I carried out most of the linguistic research reported on in this book. I thank Emma Vorlat for granting me the academic freedom for this research. The colleagues at the department provided a pleasant and stimulating atmosphere. The time for research granted by the Université Charles de Gaulle, Lille, France, where I work at present has been greatly appreciated. I thank my colleagues in the English department for their interest and support.

I am much obliged to Paul Bijnens, Jan Ducaju, Fred Truyen and Ivo Jossart for their help with the computer-part of this work. I thank Dirk Speelman for providing me with citations from the OED on CD-ROM.

In the course of the years I have had the opportunity to meet several people and discuss my work with them. I particularly thank Eugene Casad, Seana

Coulson, Adele Goldberg, Louis Goossens, Ismael F. Hussain Al-Bajjari, Andreas Jucker, Dan Jurafsky, Robert Kirsner, Philip Miller, Peter Norvig, Mary-Ellen Ryder, David Tuggy and Dekai Wu for their constructive comments or their stimulating interest in my work. I thank my proofreaders Adrian Gebbett, Camilla Mryglod, Gert Troch and Arthur Gamble. Responsibility for the final product is, of course, mine.

I am much indebted to the two anonymous reviewers appointed by John Benjamins. Their constructive comments have helped me considerably in streamlining my work and rework it into the present book. I thank Anke de Looper from Benjamins for her help with the formatting of this book and other practical matters.

A special word of thanks I reserve for my best friend Kurt Feytaerts. He shared with me the ups and downs of both my Ph.D. and this book. With a faith in me often larger than my own, he never stopped encouraging me to continue with my work.

Great is my debt to my family. Warm thanks go to my parents and parents-in-law for their support and concern, and various kinds of practical help. To my wife Hilde I am most indebted for her love, her optimism and ability to put things in perspective. She moreover has the gift of performing miracles and making things work where nobody else could or would. Without her, this work would simply not have been possible. Andreas, Joanna, Simon, and Jan-Willem made an essential contribution by their heart-warming spontaneity, their overwhelming joy of life, and particularly by limiting their interest in this book to an inquiry into the number of pages and when it would be finished. I am glad I can tell them I am home again.
