

Acknowledgements

 <https://doi.org/10.1075/cilt.231.02ack>

Page vii of

Comparative Historical Dialectology: Italo-Romance clues to Ibero-Romance sound change

Thomas D. Cravens

[Current Issues in Linguistic Theory, 231]

2002. xii, 163 pp.

© John Benjamins Publishing Company

This electronic file may not be altered in any way. For any reuse of this material written permission should be obtained from the publishers or through the Copyright Clearance Center (for USA: www.copyright.com).

For further information, please contact rights@benjamins.nl or consult our website at benjamins.com/rights

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This little book has had a long gestation. Parts of the text are reworkings of published pieces first presented orally. Chapters 3 and 6 share a good bit of the text of a paper presented in the Workshop on Latin and the Romance Languages in the Early Middle Ages, held during the Ninth International Conference on Historical Linguistics, August 1989, at Rutgers University (Cravens 1991 in References). A precursor of Chapter 4 was presented in April of 1999 at the Parasession on New Approaches to Old Problems, part of the 29th Linguistic Symposium on Romance Languages, University of Michigan (Cravens 2000). Part of Chapter 2 appeared in The Encyclopedia of Language and Linguistics, ed. by R.E. Asher et al. (Cravens 1994). A brief version of Chapter 5 was circulated clandestinely in manuscript form, and presented at the Scuola Normale Superiore, Pisa and the University of Siena in 1991.

Among respondents who offered helpful suggestions on one or more occasions are Flora Klein-Andreu, Thomas J. Walsh, Giovanna Marotta, Bernard Bichakjian, Leonardo Savoia, Pier Marco Bertinetto, Dieter Wanner, Roger Wright, Jurgen Klausenburger, Stefania Giannini, Steven N. Dworkin, José Hualde, Luciano Giannelli, and Fabrizio Franceschini. Readers of some of what became chapters – and, in a couple of cases, readers of an entire previous version of the manuscript – include Michele Loporcaro, Lee Hartman, Ray Harris-Northall, Edward F. Tuttle, John E. Joseph, Lori Repetti, and Roger Wright. Mario Saltarelli's sacrifice of Friday afternoons in his Urbana office long ago provided a catalyst, and Janice Aski's thinking refined much of my own. To one and all, and to Benjamins' anonymous readers, sincere thanks; I hope you'll forgive the occasional stubbornness.

I am also grateful to the Henry Vilas Trust at the University of Wisconsin–Madison for research funding, to John B. Dillon of Memorial Library at the same institution for his extraordinary efforts, and to Gilles Bousquet, former Chair of the Department of French and Italian, University of Wisconsin–Madison, for his kindness and for knowing just what to do, and when. Special thanks are due series editor Konrad Koerner and Anke de Looper of John Benjamins for their extraordinary patience and sage advice, as well as Luciano Giannelli for pointing out the most egregious infelicities in expression, and Maria Giuditta Chechi for calm forbearance in thorny circumstances. Greatest thanks are due Maija Salo-Cravens and Annalisa Cravens for patience and support throughout.