

List of contributors

 <https://doi.org/10.1075/cilt.253.01lis>

Pages ix–x of

Language Typology: A functional perspective

Edited by Alice Caffarel-Cayron, J.R. Martin and Christian M.I.M. Matthiessen

[Current Issues in Linguistic Theory, 253]

2004. xiv, 702 pp.

© John Benjamins Publishing Company

This electronic file may not be altered in any way. For any reuse of this material written permission should be obtained from the publishers or through the Copyright Clearance Center (for USA: www.copyright.com).

For further information, please contact rights@benjamins.nl or consult our website at benjamins.com/rights

List of contributors

Alice Caffarel is Senior Lecturer in French and Linguistics in the Department of French Studies at the University of Sydney. She specializes in French grammar and semantics and has published articles in edited volumes and International journals. She is interested in Register Variation, Corpus Linguistics, Computational Linguistics and Stylistics.

M. A. K. Halliday is Professor Emeritus in Linguistics at the University of Sydney, Sydney, Australia, Visiting Professor at Macquarie University and Honorary Professor at Peking University.

James R. Martin is Professor in Linguistics at the University of Sydney, Sydney, Australia. His research areas include Tagalog grammar and discourse, discourse semantics and theories of context, educational linguistics and systemic functional theory.

Christian M. I. M. Matthiessen is Professor (Chair) in Linguistics at Macquarie University, Sydney, Australia. His research areas include language typology, natural language processing, the modelling of meaning, lexicogrammar, corpus-based methodology, and systemic functional theory.

Edward McDonald holds a MA from Peking University and a PhD from Macquarie University. He has taught linguistics and semiotics at Peking University, the National University of Singapore, and Tsinghua University. His research areas include: the grammar and discourse patterning of modern Chinese; intellectual currents in contemporary China, particularly with regard to ideas about language, culture and nationalism; history of linguistics; syntactic theories; and the semiotics of voice and musical performance. He has published in both English and Chinese in Language Sciences, the Journal of Chinese Linguistics, Northern Forum, Histoire, épistémologie, langage, and many edited collections; and has a book manuscript in preparation with Shen Xiaolong entitled East-West dialogues on language and culture. He is currently working as an editor at Chinese Central Television.

V. Prakasam is Professor at the Central Institute of English and Foreign Languages, Hyderabad, India. His research areas include the description of Telugu, systemic functional phonology, stylistics, language and the law and systemic functional theory.

David Rose has worked with Australian Indigenous communities for the past twenty years, as an educator, student and community member. His study of the language and culture of Australia's Western Desert peoples (The Western Desert Code: An Australian Cryptogrammar, 2001) grew out of this first hand experience and a concern to accurately portray ways of meaning in the culture. He is currently a research fellow at University of Sydney, investigating language and literacy in Indigenous communities, and trains teachers of Indigenous children in literacy teaching strategies. His research interests have also included technical and scientific literacies (Science, technology and technical literacies, 1997; Science, discourse and industrial hierarchy, 1998) and discourse analysis (Martin & Rose 2003).

Erich Steiner is Professor at the Universität des Saarlandes, Saarbrücken, Germany. His research areas include the description of German, translation studies, the semiotics of music, language and action and systemic functional theory.

Elke Teich, is Professor at the Technical University, Darmstadt, Germany. She specialises in corpus-based and computational linguistics. She is particularly interested in the comparative analysis of original and translated English and German texts. She recently published the following book in this area: Cross-linguistic variation in system and text. De Gruyter: Berlin, New York. (2003).

Kazuhiro Teruya is Lecturer in Japanese, at the University of New South Wales, Sydney, Australia. His research interests include Japanese grammar and discourse, linguistics typology and the modelling of meaning. He is also involved as a researcher in the Laboratory for Language – based Intelligent Systems at Brain Science Institute, Riken, Japan.

Minh Duc Thai is Lecturer in translation studies at the University of Western Sydney, Sydney. His research interests include translation, contrastive analysis and TESOL.