ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am indebted first and foremost to André Martinet who introduced me to functional and structural linguistics while I was working with him on general linguistics in Paris and who has since continued to guide me in my research in this field. I am aware that my contact with fellow functionalists have often led me to ponder over certain aspects of functional phonology as well as of other domains of functional linguistics, and I am therefore grateful to them all.

My thanks are due to a number of colleagues who kindly read an earlier version of the manuscript and offered comments and suggestions: Jan Mulder (himself a functionalist) and Peter Roach, David Barber, the late Thomas Hope, Michel Viel, and an anonymous reader. Michel Viel has, in addition, kindly put at my disposal his French translation from the original Russian of some of N. S. Trubetzkoy's letters to R. Jakobson.

My thanks are also due to Andrei Avram and Josef Vachek who have kindly made available to me some of their writings, and further to Björn Andréson and Ichirō Kōno who most obligingly and so promptly sent to me at my request some material which had long been inaccessible to me. I am grateful to Jan Firbas who provided me with information relating to some aspects of the Prague Linguistic Circle, to Niels Davidsen-Nielsen with whom I had useful discussions on the theory of neutralization and the archiphoneme, and to the late W. Freeman Twaddell who gave me sustained encouragement from across the Atlantic.

My special gratitude must be registered here to Konrad Koerner who, in his capacity as General Editor of the present series, Current Issues in Linguistic Theory (CILT), gave me first of all the opportunity to publish this book and then lavished on me patient, unremitting and unstinting editorial assistance throughout the final stage of the preparation of my manuscript.

Mrs. Anne Porcelijn of John Benjamins B.V. kindly acted as a bridge between the publisher and myself with her technical advice during the period in which I transformed my typed manuscript on a word-processor.

Last but not least, I wish to express my special thanks to my wife, Maryvonne, who, as another functionalist, bore with many an hour's discussions I provoked on various aspects of the theory of neutralization and the archiphoneme, even at table. She went through the final version of the manuscript.
