ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

ALL BOOKS HAVE HISTORY; this present volume may have more than most. It is one of the first tangible products of a relatively new learned society – the Society for Pidgin and Creole Linguistics. It owes its life, depth and seriousness to the members of the Society, and especially to our very various contributors. It owes its existence to the enthusiastic sponsorship of Pieter Muysken, editor of the Creole Language Library, and of Claire and John Benjamins, its publishers. As the book's editors, we very gratefully acknowledge the help of all these individuals who made the work possible.

At the outset, the papers published here were reviewed by a panel of officers of the Society, and we thank Glenn Gilbert, Charlene Sato, John Singler, William Stewart and Donald Winford for that indispensable work. John Singler later became co-editor of the Creole Language Library, and in that capacity he carefully and meticulously read the book and improved it considerably. At John Benjamins, we had the expert coordination and help of Yola de Lusenet and Cornelis Vaes.

Each of us have local obligations which necessitate acknowledgement. Frank Byrne would like to thank Amy Kitchen, his assistant, for her many loyal hours of work on the project; Gregory Bond, Pat Carson and Kenneth Powell for advice on the volume's layout; Julia Coll for her encouragement and support; Marcia Tackett, Paula Prose and Melinda Tackett for their secretarial help, and Jerry Holt for his support and assistance; Gary Stottlemeyer for patiently sharing his computer expertise; and Brian Joseph of the Department of Linguistics of The Ohio State University for his considerable assistance in providing computer hardware and software which made our task so much simpler. John Holm would like to thank Michael Pye for his forbearance, as usual.

But as much as any of these individuals, we thank the contributors to this book for their patience and cooperation during its long gestation and, above all, for the range and insight of their contributions to the very fertile field of creole linguistics.
