The origin of this book lies in an international conference entitled “Ibero-Asian Creoles: Comparative perspectives”, held at the University of Macau on the 28th and 29th of October, 2010. This was the first scholarly meeting entirely dedicated to the Portuguese- and Spanish-lexified Creoles of Asia and, while some of the papers presented there are now included in this book, others were added at a later date. We are particularly indebted to the Faculty of Social Sciences and Humanities for its generous support of the 2010 conference, and to all the participants, who turned it into such a stimulating event. A special word of thanks goes to the University of Macau, which funded the research project “Portuguese-based Creole and Semi-Creole languages: typology, grammatical analysis and language endangerment” and thereby enabled both the conference and this book to take shape.

A volume of this nature is truly a collaborative effort. We wish to thank all the authors for their professionalism, dedication, and their understanding when asked to make adjustments in the interest of uniformity. We were also fortunate enough to count on the generosity of a host of colleagues who collaborated as anonymous reviewers or consultants; their comments and suggestions have made this volume much more solid. Finally, we are also very grateful to the editors of the Creole Language Library series, Umberto Ansaldo and Miriam Meyerhoff, and all the staff at John Benjamins for their constant support throughout the production of this book.

In addition to the University of Macau, which supported his research activities until 2011, Hugo C. Cardoso also wishes to thank the Fundação Oriente, whose sponsorship allowed him to carry out the final stages of the editorial work.
