

Acknowledgements

 <https://doi.org/10.1075/dapsac.9.02ack>

Pages xi–xii of (Mis)Representing Islam: The racism and rhetoric of British broadsheet newspapers

John Richardson

[Discourse Approaches to Politics, Society and Culture, 9]
2004. xxiii, 260 pp.

© John Benjamins Publishing Company

This electronic file may not be altered in any way. For any reuse of this material written permission should be obtained from the publishers or through the Copyright Clearance Center (for USA: www.copyright.com).

For further information, please contact rights@benjamins.nl or consult our website at benjamins.com/rights

Acknowledgements

I am grateful to many people, in many capacities, for making this book possible.

First, I would like to thank my sister Amy for her financial support. Without her generous provision during my ‘grant-less’ first year of doctoral study, I simply would not have been able to start let alone finish my thesis: thank you very much Amy. In a similar vein, I would like to extend this gratitude to the ESRC for funding my research for the remaining three years of study (Postgraduate Award R00429834654). Without this financial support this research project would have been a great deal more difficult to complete, if it could have been completed at all.

I would like to thank the Department of Journalism Studies, University of Sheffield for their academic and institutional support — particularly Peter Cole who gave me the time and space necessary to redraft my thesis into the present volume.

My thanks to those colleagues and reviewers who have looked at, commented upon and at times criticised draft versions of this book. In particular I would like to thank the series editors Paul Chilton and Ruth Wodak, Bob Franklin (who supervised the thesis on which this book is based) and Roopa Ramaiya, whose advice and encouragement at a crucial juncture was particularly welcome. I would also like to thank my friends who have assisted in the completion of this book. In this regard I would like to thank Albert, Harps, Lee, Mike, Paul, Stephen and Vincent for their support, intelligent (though often infuriating) conversation and their friendship. Above all, I would like to thank my wife Kirsty for her encouragement, patience (at so many bundles of newspapers all over the house!) and love over years — the brevity of such an acknowledgement simply does not (and could not) do justice to the level of this support.

Finally, although it may embarrass him, this book is dedicated to Teun van Dijk. Teun’s writings — both published and via personal emails — have contributed to the present volume at various stages of my research. For his informal support and advice during the early planning stages, and his helpful reviews and appraisal of my later work, I am personally particularly grateful. More generally, many of us who consider ourselves ‘discourse analysts’ owe him a larger intellectual debt for his pioneering research, particularly given the antipathy and sometimes outright hostility he received for his work on élite racism. This book is dedicated to him with thanks.