

Contributors

 <https://doi.org/10.1075/ds.19.02con>

Pages xi–xii of

The Ethics of Literary Communication: Genuineness, directness, indirectness

Edited by Roger D. Sell, Adam Borch and Inna Lindgren

[Dialogue Studies, 19] 2013. xii, 271 pp.

© John Benjamins Publishing Company

This electronic file may not be altered in any way. For any reuse of this material written permission should be obtained from the publishers or through the Copyright Clearance Center (for USA: www.copyright.com).

For further information, please contact rights@benjamins.nl or consult our website at benjamins.com/rights

Contributors

Adam Borch is a member of the Literary Communication Project at Åbo Akademi University. His interests are in eighteenth century English poetry, paratextual materials, and literary pragmatics. At present he is developing a communicational account of Pope's Dunciad, paying special attention to the poem's addressivity. A recent article is "Pope's Community-making through The Dunciad Variorum".

Catherine Conan is Senior Lecturer at the University of Western Brittany. Her main field of interest is Irish studies, with a special focus on contemporary literature and art. One of her recent articles on present-day Irish poetry is "Dancing – and writing – at the crossroads: Communication and community-making in Ciaran Carson's Last Night's Fun".

Jason Finch is currently a research fellow with the Academy of Finland. His interests are mainly on the relationship between literature and the human experience of place. A recent book is E. M. Forster and English Place: A Literary Topography. Work in progress includes a book on literary accounts of the London slums between 1820 and 1960.

Sebastian Hüsich lectures in German Studies and Philosophy at the University of Pau and the University of Basel. His main fields of interest are nineteenth and twentieth century philosophy and literature, and interdisciplinary studies in philosophy and literature. He has recently edited Philosophy and Literature and the Crisis of Metaphysics and published articles on Kierkegaard and Musil.

Inna Lindgren is a member of the Literary Communication Project at Åbo Akademi University, and is at present working on a communicational account of Rudyard Kipling. Recent articles are "Plain Tales from the Hills as emergent literature" and "Kipling's soldiers and Kipling's readers: Members of a single community?"

Anna Orhanen is an associate researcher at the University of Turku and teaches at King's College London and Royal Holloway College London. Her main research interests include subjectivity, aesthetic experience and self-understanding in fin de siècle and twentieth century literature, especially Proust. Recent articles have been on the role of paradoxes in the aesthetics of Oscar Wilde.

Bo Pettersson is Professor of American Literature at the University of Helsinki. His interests include Anglo-American literature, narrative studies, metaphor theory, and literary interpretation and criticism. He has recently co-edited Cognition and Literary Interpretation in Practice and Narrative and Identity: Theoretical Approaches and Critical Analyses.

Carmen Popescu is Senior Lecturer in Romanian at the University of Craiova. Her current research is on parody in contemporary poetry, intertextuality, and dialogism. Recent publications include an edited volume on comparativism, identity and communication, plus articles on postmodernist Romanian poetry.

Mohamed Saki is Lecturer at the University of Brest. His research field is discourse analysis, and he is particularly interested in intersubjectivity, audience construction, and ethos. A recent article is on Hanif Kureishi's My Ear at His Heart.

Jonathan P. A. Sell is Senior Lecturer in English at the University of Alcalá. He has worked on early modern travel writing and Shakespeare, and is especially interested in rhetoric, wit, and identity. He has recently published Allusion, Identity and Community in Recent British Writing and edited Metaphor and Diaspora in Contemporary Writing.

Roger D. Sell is Emeritus H. W. Donner Research Professor of Literary Communication at Åbo Akademi University. He has published on a wide range of authors from several different periods of English and American literature, and has developed an account of literature as one among other forms of communication. Recent books are Communicational Criticism: Studies in Literature as Dialogue and Literary Community-Making: The Dialogicality of English Texts from the Seventeenth Century to the Present.

Johan Siebers is Senior Lecturer in English at the University of Central Lancashire. His specialist areas are German philosophy since Kant, the philosophy of communication, and metaphysics. He is Editor of Empedocles: European Journal for the Philosophy of Communication.

David Stromberg has a research position in English at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. He is working on fictional narrative from an expanded phenomenological point of view, as a way of examining links between structural complexity and moral vision. Recent articles have been on Dostoevsky's Demons and Camus's La Peste.

Ewa Szypula has a research position in French at King's College London. Her field of interest is nineteenth century French literature and correspondence, and she is at present writing about Balzac.