The most important contributor to my development as a linguist and the final product of this work is my advisor, Judith Aissen. She has always encouraged me to engage in field research and to be creative in my solutions to linguistic puzzles. Through her own work and her excellence as a teacher and advisor, I learned to think and write precisely. Her generosity with her time and her ability to carefully consider drafts is legendary and this book benefited significantly from her input. My other committee members also contributed greatly to my dissertation. James McCloskey provided important insight into the formal aspects of the analysis of resumption. I thank Donka Farkas for her input on the pragmatics of contrastive topic.

The final committee member, Eva Hajičová, hosted me at the Institute of Formal and Applied Linguistics at Charles University in Prague in Fall, 2003. Much of the data that provided inspiration for this project was gathered and analyzed during that time. I thank Eva Hajičová and Petr Sgall for the time they gave me for consultation, as well as their long-distance support during the research and writing of this work.

This work would, quite literally, not have been possible without the help of my Czech consultants: Jana Hejduková, Věra Kafková, Tomáš Koukolík, Jitka Malíková, Hana Pariser, Jakub Šíma, Karolina Wencelová, and employees at Café Prague in San Francisco. I especially thank Martina Šimová and Kristina Valentinová for their regular help over the past few years. Their patience and careful consideration of the data made this project not only possible, but enjoyable.
