Preface

There are a number of people who helped to shape the present work. This book would have been impossible to complete or even contemplate without the generous native speakers of Wolof that I have worked with, both in the United States and Senegal. I have been extremely lucky to have Mariame Sy as my Wolof teacher, fellow graduate student, language consultant, and friend. At the University of Kansas, I have been fortunate to work with Khady Tamba. In Dakar, my non linguist language consultants Seynabou Ndoeye and Mustapha Djigo carefully considered all of the Wolof data that I asked them about, sent me in new directions with their insights, and cheerfully sat through hours of elicitation. Many thanks go to the Sy family for their great hospitality, enormous help with the logistics of my stays in Senegal, and for only speaking to me in Wolof, even when it might have been easier to do otherwise. I am also grateful to Omar Ka and Fallou Ngom, who have supplied valuable cross dialectal data. I thank you all for sharing your language with me.

Hilda Koopman provided invaluable feedback on almost every topic and analytical approach in this book. Comments, questions, and challenges from Ivano Caponigro, Leston Buell, Jason Kandybowicz, Dominique Sportiche, and Tim Stowell on a number of subparts of this book have improved it greatly. The book has benefitted in innumerable ways from discussions with: Adam Albright, José Alemán Bañón, Khalaf Al Shammiry, Jon Coffee, Robert Fiorentino, Alison Gabriele, Allard Jongman, Sok-Ju Kim, Gregory Kobele, Jongil Kwon, Haiyong Liu, Pedro Mateo Pedro, Sara Rosen, Craig Sailor, Joan Sereno, Gianluca Storto, Jie Zhang. In putting together the final version of this volume, I owe a special debt of gratitude to Leston Buell, who spent many hours going over every page with a fine toothed comb. I also extend much proofreading gratitude to Jon Coffee and Sok-Ju Kim. I thank William and Dorothy Torrence, Sonjia Torrence Gordon, Michael Baker, Stephen Berry, and Chuck Mobley for their indirect, though constant support for the research endeavors encapsulated in this book and their inadvertent grammaticality judgments, which also appear here. I also thank audiences who heard and commented on parts of the material in this book at UCLA, University of Kansas, University of Milan-Bicocca, UC San Diego, Leiden University, 31st

Annual Meeting of the Berkeley Linguistics Society, 4th GLOW Asia, and the 32nd, 35th, and 38th Annual Conferences on African Linguistics. At Benjamins, I would like to thank Werner Abraham, Elly van Gelderen, and an anonymous reviewer for their comments on the manuscript and Kees Vaes for his assistance in making the publication of this book such a smooth process.
