Preface

The Editors of this volume would like to express their gratitude to everyone involved in this project. It has been a most rewarding intellectual journey.

This volume is the culmination of 4 years of collaborative effort on the part of the Working Group on Nonsententials, funded by the Wayne State University Humanities Center. We would especially like to thank Walter Edwards, Director of the Humanities Center, for this generous support. We are also grateful to several programs and departments at Wayne State University for additional support, including the Linguistics Program, the Department of Romance Languages and Literatures, and the Department of English.

The Working Group on Nonsententials brought together a number of Wayne State University faculty and graduate students, listed here in alphabetical order: Ellen Barton, Eugenia Casielles, Walter Edwards, Kate Paesani, Ljiljana Progovac, Patricia Siple, and Nicola Work. The Working Group held two workshops in 2003 (Small Structures: Sentential and Nonsentential Analyses) and 2004 (Small Utterances: Views on Syntax, Acquisition, Aphasia, and Pidgins), which featured presentations from members of the group as well as invited speakers. We would like to thank the following colleagues for their contributions to the workshops: Herman Kolk, University of Nijmegen; Jason Merchant, University of Chicago; Thomas Roeper, University of Massachusetts; Robert Stainton, University of Western Ontario; and Donald Winford, The Ohio State University.

This volume benefited from an extensive review process. Michel DeGraff reviewed the entire volume, and his suggestions were invaluable in sharpening the analyses presented here. We thank him here for what was a monumental effort. We also thank additional reviewers, including Alan Beretta, Rita Berndt, Anthony Grant, Lisa Green, Liliame Haegeman, Barbara Partee, Julia Herschensohn, Caroline Heycock, Ruth Kempson, Eric Potsdam, and Tim Stowell.

The Series Editors of Linguistics Today, Elly van Gelderen and Werner Abraham, as well as Kees Vaes at John Benjamins were most helpful in bringing this volume to press. Thanks also go to Rachel Anderson for her work on copyediting and formatting.

Finally, we would like to thank all of the authors in the volume for working with us in this exploration of the syntax of nonsententials.
