This book is a reviewed version of my doctoral dissertation, defended in the fall of 2004 at the Instituto Universitario Ortega y Gasset in Madrid. Although I have retained the overall structure and the spirit of the proposals defended there, I have refined some of the ideas that had been merely sketched out in the earlier version.

This monograph is the result of several years of work at the Instituto Universitario Ortega y Gasset in Madrid and at the Department of Linguistics of the University of California, Los Angeles. The people I have met along the way and the experiences I have had during this time have made it well worth the effort. I am especially in debt to my thesis supervisors, Tim Stowell and Violeta Demonte, for their encouragement and support at every moment. Without them, this work would not have been possible. I want to express my respect for both of you here. Many thanks to Olga Fernández Soriano for her advice and support, and to Juan Romero for having encouraged me to try America. Likewise, I want to express my gratitude to the committee in charge of judging this work at the defense, Professors María Luisa Hernaz, María Jesús Fernández Leborans, Olga Fernández Soriano, Myriam Uribe-Etxebarria, and Luis Sáez. I am truly grateful for their comments and observations, which have helped me out to substantially improve the original. Remaining errors and loose ends are my own. Thanks a lot to Ignacio Bosque, Eugenio Bustos, and Tim Stowell, who helped me obtain financial support for this work. Thanks to them I enjoyed Predoctoral Fellowships at the University Complutense of Madrid and at the University of California, Los Angeles.

During various stages of this work I benefited from discussion with many people, among which I must mention Hagit Borer and Daniel Büring. Thanks a lot for your interest in my work and your detailed comments.

I owe special thanks to Tim Stowell, since my first visit to UCLA until the very last minute of submitting this monograph. Thanks for your immense generosity and patience. Thanks for being always on the other side of the mail, punctually commenting on my every thought. Thanks for your friendship. Many thanks also to Myriam Uribe-Etxebarria, who was reachable via mail and phone for discussion every time I needed her during the preparation of this book. Thanks a lot for your encouragement and understanding. Thanks a lot to Ivano Caponigro, for encouraging me to submit the proposal of this book. Thanks to Elizabeth Laurençot, for her help in copy editing the last version, which made the book look better.

Thanks from the depths of my heart to my friends Ana, Mer, Eva, and Cristina, and to my “L.A. family,” Heriberto, Adriana, Selene, Felipe, Amàlia, Javi, Shae, Ivano, Luca, Jelena, Stefano, and Ed. You made my life incredibly enjoyable then, and continue to do so now. You know I miss you all so badly.

Last, but not least, I want to express my gratitude to my family. For their generosity, this book is dedicated to them. To my husband, Rafa, thank you for your endless support, encouragement, understanding, and empathy at every moment. Thank you for having made this possible. To our two children, who were born in the process of this work, Ignacio and Javier, thank you for being such good babies and giving me the time I needed to work. Thanks a lot to my parents, for having taught me not to give up.
