

Contributors

 <https://doi.org/10.1075/lal.24.003con>

Pages xv–xx of

Scientific Approaches to Literature in Learning Environments

Edited by Michael Burke, Olivia Fialho and Sonia Zyngier

[Linguistic Approaches to Literature, 24]

2016. xix, 309 pp.

© John Benjamins Publishing Company

This electronic file may not be altered in any way. For any reuse of this material written permission should be obtained from the publishers or through the Copyright Clearance Center (for USA: www.copyright.com).

For further information, please contact rights@benjamins.nl or consult our website at benjamins.com/rights

Contributors

P. Matthijs Bal is Reader in the School of Management, University of Bath, UK. He holds a Ph.D. (2009) in Human Resource Management from VU University Amsterdam, the Netherlands. His research interests concern fictional narratives in the workplace, the aging workforce, individualization of work arrangements, and workplace dignity. His work has been published in, among others, PLOS One, Journal of Management Studies, and Journal of Organizational Behavior. More information can be found on <http://www.matthijsbal.com>.

Martine Braaksma was assistant professor at the Research Institute of Child Development and Education of the University of Amsterdam, specialized in writing research, observational learning and teacher training. She is currently working as a researcher at the Education Council of the Netherlands, in The Hague. She published in Learning and Instruction, Cognition and Instruction, and Journal of Educational Psychology, among other journals.

Michael Burke is a Professor of Rhetoric at University College Roosevelt, Utrecht University. He is a series editor for the Routledge Studies in Rhetoric and Stylistics. His publications include Literary Reading, Cognition and Emotion: An Exploration of the Oceanic Mind (Routledge, 2011), Pedagogical Stylistics: Current Trends in Language, Literature and ELT (et. al, eds. Continuum, 2012) and The Routledge Handbook of Stylistics (ed. 2014).

Sylvia C. Chard is Professor Emeritus of Early Childhood Education at the University of Alberta, Canada. For seven years she was Director of the Laboratory School, the Child Study Center, in the Department of Elementary Education. She has co-authored Engaging Children's Minds: The Project Approach (ABC Clio, 3rd edition 2014) and From My Side: Being a Child (Kaplan 2008). She has lectured and offered workshops on interdisciplinary learning worldwide. Further information on the Project Approach can be found at www.projectapproach.org

Anna Chesnokova is Professor of the English Philology at Borys Grinchenko Kyiv University, Ukraine. She has published on Empirical Studies of Literature, cognitive poetics, stylistics and literary awareness. She wrote a chapter for The International Reception of Emily Dickinson (Continuum Press, 2009), co-edited Directions in Empirical Literary Studies (John Benjamins, 2008) and co-authored chapters for Cases on Distance Delivery and Learning Outcomes: Emerging Trends and Programs (IGI Global, 2009) and Teaching Stylistics (Palgrave Macmillan, 2011).

Olivia Fialho is a post-doctoral researcher at the Department of Media and Culture Studies, Utrecht University, on the project “Uses of Literary Narrative Fiction in Social Contexts” of The Netherlands Organization for Scientific Research (finditinfiction.org). She holds a Ph.D. in Comparative Literature (University of Alberta, 2012) and contributes to empirical studies of literary reading and education, literary awareness, and pedagogical stylistics (e.g. Language and Literature, 2007, 2010; English in Education, 2011). She co-coordinates the PALA SIG on Pedagogical Stylistics.

Frank Hakemulder (Utrecht University) specializes in the psychology of literature and media, and focuses his research on the effects of narratives. He leads two national research projects of The Netherlands Organization for Scientific Research, one absorbing experiences with narratives in film and literature; the other on the effects of reading literature on self concept and social perceptions (see finditinfiction.org). Currently he is president of the International Society for the Empirical Study of Literature and Media.

David Hanauer's research focuses on authentic literacy practices in scientific and poetic discourse, in first and second languages. He is Professor of English at Indiana University of Pennsylvania and Lead Assessment Coordinator of the SEAPHAGES Program. He is editor of Scientific Study of Literature journal.

Tanja Janssen is assistant professor at the Research Institute of Child Development and Education of the University of Amsterdam, and member of the Research Team in Language, Literature and Arts Education (<http://www.rtle.nl/>). She is editor of L1- Educational Studies in Language and Literature. She specializes in literature teaching, art education and creative writing pedagogy. Her work has been published in, among others, Journal of Educational Psychology, British Journal of Educational Psychology, and Scientific Study of Literature.

Fang-Yu Liao is a Ph.D. candidate in Composition and TESOL at Indiana University of Pennsylvania. She graduated from M.A. TESOL program at Indiana University of Pennsylvania in 2012. Her M.A. thesis is entitled “ESL Students’ Writing Experiences and Perceived Poetry Writing Ability.” Besides L2 poetry writing, her research interests are L2 creative writing pedagogy, World Englishes, and translingual writing.

Shisheng Liu is Professor of English in the Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures, Tsinghua University, Beijing, China. He teaches courses on stylistics and serves as President of China Society of Stylistics. Devoted to stylistics since the 1980s, he has numerous publications, e.g., “Theories and Practices of Stylistics” (1992), Outlines of Western Stylistics (1997), A Dictionary of Western Stylistics (2004, with Z.L. Hu), Stylistics (2008, with R. Q. Zhu) and What Is Stylistics (2015).

Michaela Mahlberg is Professor of Corpus Linguistics and Director of the Centre for Corpus Research (CCR) at the University of Birmingham, UK. She is the editor of the International Journal of Corpus Linguistics (John Benjamins) and co-editor of the book series Corpus & Discourse (Bloomsbury). Her publications include Corpus Stylistics and Dickens's Fiction (Routledge, 2013), English General Nouns: A Corpus Theoretical Approach (John Benjamins, 2005), and the co-authored Text, Discourse and Corpora (Continuum, 2007).

David S. Miall is Professor Emeritus in the Department of English & Film Studies at the University of Alberta in Canada. His publications include Humanities and the Computer: New Directions (1990), and Romanticism: The CD-ROM (1997), and a monograph, Literary Reading: Empirical and Theoretical Studies (2006). He has authored over 130 chapters and journal articles. He specializes in literature of the British Romantic period, and the empirical study of literary reading – a field in which he has collaborated with Don Kuiken (Department of Psychology) since 1990.

Masako Nasu is Associate Professor at the Language Education Centre, Okayama University, Japan. Her recent publications include “Groping for Internal Realism: Woolf’s Early Experiments in Short Fictions” (Virginia Woolf Review, 27, 2010), ‘The Role of Stylistics in Japan: A Pedagogical Perspective’ (et. al, Language and Literature, 21 (2), 2012), and “The Role of Literature in Foreign Language Learning” in M. Teranishi et. al (eds.) Literature and Language Learning in the EFL Classroom (Palgrave Macmillan, 2015).

Takayuki Nishihara is an Associate Professor in Applied Linguistics at Prefectural University of Hiroshima, Japan. His research interest includes literary reading processes in a foreign language, teaching and testing procedures for literary texts in EFL, and the effects of poetry reading on second language acquisition. He is the author of “Achievement Tests for Literary Reading in General EFL Reading Courses” in Teaching Literature and Language in the EFL Classroom (Palgrave Macmillan).

David Peplow is a Senior Lecturer in English Language at Sheffield Hallam University. His research interests include discourse analysis, stylistics, and health humanities. David’s first monograph entitled The Discourse of Reading Groups: Integrated Cognitive and Sociocultural Perspectives (co-authored with Joan Swann, Paola Trimarco, and Sara Whiteley) is published by Routledge. His first single-authored monograph, entitled Talk About Books: A Study of Reading Groups, is to be published by Bloomsbury in 2016.

Violeta Sotirova is a Lecturer in Stylistics at the University of Nottingham. Her research focuses on narrative viewpoint and the presentation of consciousness.

She has published two books: D.H. Lawrence and Narrative Viewpoint and Consciousness in Modernist Fiction, and a series of articles and chapters on narrative consciousness, reader responses to point of view and authorial revisions of free indirect style. She has also edited The Bloomsbury Companion to Stylistics.

Peter Stockwell is Professor of Literary Linguistics at the University of Nottingham, UK, and a Fellow of the English Association. His work in stylistics includes The Language of Surrealism (2016), Texture (2009), Cognitive Poetics (2002), and the co-edited Cambridge Handbook of Stylistics (2014), Cognitive Grammar in Literature (2014), The Language and Literature Reader (2008) and Contemporary Stylistics (2007). He has also published 11 other books and over 80 articles in stylistics, sociolinguistics and applied linguistics.

Masayuki Teranishi is Professor at the University of Hyogo, Japan. His recent publications include “A Stylistic Analysis of Herzog: A Mode of ‘Postmodern Polyphony’” (Language and Literature, 16 (1), 2007), Polyphony in Fiction: A Stylistic Analysis of Middlemarch, Nostromo, and Herzog (Peter Lang, 2008), “The Role of Stylistics in Japan: A Pedagogical Perspective” (et. al, Language and Literature, 21 (2), 2012), and Literature and Language Learning in the EFL Classroom (et. al, eds. Palgrave Macmillan, 2015).

Odette Vassallo is lecturer in English Language and Linguistics at the University of Malta, where she is also director of the Centre for English Language Proficiency. She holds a Ph.D. in linguistics from the University of Nottingham. She teaches in areas related to English language and linguistics and TESOL. Her research interests lie in the field of stylistics, literary reading, learner corpora, applied linguistics, and ESL.

Vander Viana is Lecturer in the School of Education at the University of Stirling. He holds a Ph.D. in English Language and Linguistics (Queen’s University) and specializes in Corpus Linguistics, Discourse Analysis, TESOL and Applied Linguistics. He is the co-founder of the Corpus Linguistics in Scotland (CLiS) Network (www.stir.ac.uk/clis) and the acting convenor of the Corpus Linguistics Special Interest Group of the British Association for Applied Linguistics. He serves on the editorial board of international journals (e.g. TESOL Journal and Brazilian Journal of Applied Linguistics) and co-edited Perspectives on Corpus Linguistics (John Benjamins, 2011).

Cuiling Zhang is Associate Professor in the Foreign Languages Department, China University of Geosciences, Beijing, teaching the English major students such courses as Reading and Writing, and American Literature. She specializes in early twentieth-century American literature, with emphasis on the origin and development of Modernism.

Zhijun Zhang is a Ph.D. candidate of English language and literature at Tsinghua University, Beijing, China. His research areas are stylistics, linguistics, and cognitive poetics. He is also a lecturer in the Foreign Languages Department, China University of Geosciences, Beijing, teaching the English major students such courses as Extensive Reading and General Linguistics.

Sonia Zyngier has authored numerous papers on literary awareness, pedagogical stylistics (Elsevier Encyclopedia of Language and Linguistics, 2006), and empirical research in literary education. She has co-edited Literature and Stylistics for Language Learners (Palgrave, 2006), Directions in Empirical Literary Studies (John Benjamins, 2008), and Literary Education and Digital Learning: Methods and Technologies for Humanities Studies (IGI, 2010), and co-authored Scientific Methods for the Humanities (2012). Currently she is co-editor of the Linguistic Approaches to Literature Series (John Benjamins).

