

Table of contents

 <https://doi.org/10.1075/lal.7.toc>

Pages v–viii of

Psyche and the Literary Muses: The contribution of literary content to scientific psychology

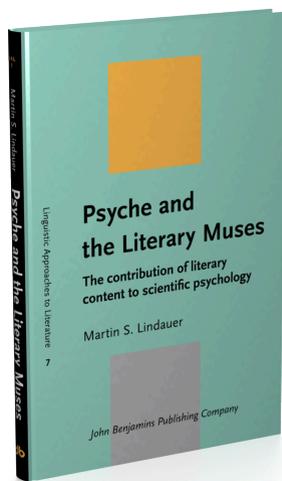

Martin S. Lindauer

[Linguistic Approaches to Literature, 7] 2009. xiii, 209 pp.

© John Benjamins Publishing Company

This electronic file may not be altered in any way. For any reuse of this material written permission should be obtained from the publishers or through the Copyright Clearance Center (for USA: www.copyright.com).

For further information, please contact rights@benjamins.nl or consult our website at benjamins.com/rights

Dedicated to

Rudolf Arnheim (1904–2007)

Daniel E. Berlyne (1924–1976)

Colin Martindale (1943–2008)

Table of contents

List of tables	IX
Preface	XI
Part 1. Introduction
1. An orientation	3
2. Similarities and differences across the psychology of art	7
3. Competing psychological approaches to the arts: Clinical and scientific	15
4. The status of the scientific psychology of art	31
Part 2. The psychology of literature: An overview
5. The psychology of literature: Comparisons with other psychologies of art	41
6. A scientific psychology of literary content: Obstacles and steps towards a solution	53
Part 3. The psychological relevance of brief literary forms
7. Poetry, autobiographies, and titles: Their contribution to cognition, creativity, and physiognomic perception	67
8. Literary names, indices, and clichés: Their contribution to physiognomic perception, emotions, and thinking	79
9. Quotations: Their psychological usefulness	91
Part 4. The psychological content of quotations: Person perception and attitudes to aging
10. Person perception and the psychological attributes of the body	105
11. A study of quotations on the psychological implications of the body	111
12. Prologue: Aging and the arts	119
13. Aging's memorable lines: A study of quotations about growing old	127
14. The preoccupations of aging: The subject matter of quotations	131
15. Evaluations of aging in quotations	143
Part 5. Conclusion
16. Implications of a content-oriented psychology of literature	161

Notes	171
References cited	189
Index	205