Acknowledgments

This book is a revised version of my PhD dissertation completed in June 1993 at the Department of Linguistics, McGill University, under the direction of Professor Lydia White. I should like to thank her for all her help and encouragement. I should also like to thank the other professors at McGill University and Concordia University in Montréal.

The research reported here has been generously supported from the following sources, for which I am grateful. The research grants of McGill faculty members: Social Science and Humanities Research Council of Canada (SSHRCC) research grants #410-87-1071 and #410-90-0523 to Prof. Lisa Travis and Prof. Lydia White, and SSHRCC #410-92-0047 to Prof. Lydia White; Government of Québec FCAR research grant #88-EQ-3630 to Prof. Lisa Travis and Prof. Lydia White, and FCAR #91-ER-0578 to Professors Mark Baker, Fred Genesee, Lisa Travis, and Lydia White. I was also fortunate to be awarded two McGill Major Fellowships (the Max Binz Fellowship and the Alma Mater Fellowship), and a McGill Graduate Faculty research grant for fieldwork in China. Finally, the time for revisions for publication was supported by a Faculty of Arts Summer Stipend from the University of Pittsburgh.

Many people have helped and advised me. I wish to express thanks to Wang Liren, Ye Xiangrong, and the late Zhang Zijing. Special thanks are due to thank Dai Yong for the friendship and help with judgments over the past 13 years. Professor Chen Muzhu (Head of the English Language Training Centre, Hunan Medical University) and Professor Wang Wenxin (Deputy Chair of Foreign Languages, Hunan Normal University) have generously provided me with access to students and facilities.

I wish to express thanks to the editors, Harald Clahsen and William Rutherford, for the help with this book, as well as Kees Vaes for his patience. The comments of an external reviewer were most insightful and challenging, and were particularly helpful with revising the manuscript. I wish time had allowed me to follow up on more of the suggestions made. I should also like to thank Len Talmy and Brian MacWhinney for discussion. All remaining shortcomings are of course mine.
