Acknowledgments

This book is based on my doctoral dissertation. The text of a dissertation is but the tip of the iceberg. What is hidden is the work of people who contributed to the thesis, either by their own work on the subject and related topics, or by the direct help they provided the Ph.D.-student. Here I want to name only those who helped me directly.

First of all, I want to thank Melissa Bowerman. She supervised both my M.A.-thesis and my Ph.D.-thesis, and with her patience, persistence, and guidance throughout these years, she taught me a lot about how to manage the strings that are attached to the balloons. I wish to thank her for her ingenuity in providing counterarguments to my claims, and for her insistence on forcing me to improve the structure of the thesis at all levels of its organization. The time and energy that she has invested will save you a lot of energy and time.

For their critical discussions and motivation, I want to thank Ingrid Kaufmann, Dieter Wunderlich, Barbara Stiebels, and Janet Randall, as well as Harald Baayen, Kees de Bot, Bernard Comrie, Sonja Eisenbeiß, Wolfgang Klein, Pim Levelt, Maaïke Verrips, and Jürgen Weissenborn. Special thanks to Fp. and Norbert Groeben, for their mental wake-up calls before graduation.

My time at the Max Planck Institute for Psycholinguistics, first during the work on my M.A.-thesis, then as a Ph.D.-student, I thoroughly enjoyed. I owe a lot to the members of the reference project. Their discussions of the properties of spatial and temporal reference often confused me, and I am glad they didn't mind.

Several people were especially helpful when it came to do the experiments. First of all, I am indebted to all those curious and daring children who participated as subjects in my experiments, to their patient teachers and trusting parents, and to Marita Lange, who organized my various field labs. Inge Doehring kept friendly despite numerous revisions of the drawings that I needed, Harald Baayen helped me analyze the data with a statistical method yet unbeknownst to me, and Frauke Hellwig kept up the UNIX connection.

I am especially indebted to Misty Gaitens and Ted Struik, who turned the original version of the thesis into a book, and to Ted C. Struik, the concrete poet.

For keeping up my spirits, I want to thank Renée van Boxsel and Lily Sprangers. My special thanks go to Oscar van Weerdenburg and the Brinkmänner, Willy, Anna, Klaus, Renate und Anhang. My parents Anna und Willy often supported my decisions even though they didn't agree, and Oscar has been accompanying me in facing the consequences.
