

Acknowledgements

 <https://doi.org/10.1075/pbns.117.03ack>

Pages xv–xvi of

Stance in Talk: A conversation analysis of Mandarin final particles

Ruey-Jiuan Regina Wu

[Pragmatics & Beyond New Series, 117] 2004. xvi, 260 pp.

© John Benjamins Publishing Company

This electronic file may not be altered in any way. For any reuse of this material written permission should be obtained from the publishers or through the Copyright Clearance Center (for USA: www.copyright.com).

For further information, please contact rights@benjamins.nl or consult our website at benjamins.com/rights

Acknowledgments

This book started out as a Ph.D. dissertation at the University of California, Los Angeles. As this study stands at the intersection of conversation analysis, interactional linguistics and Chinese linguistics, I have included in this book a new chapter giving an overview of recent developments in these fields, and have included discussions of several related recent studies which were either not available to me or had not come to my attention at the time when I finished my dissertation. Having completed this manuscript, I'd like to acknowledge with profound gratitude the many teachers, colleagues and friends who have inspired or supported me on this long journey.

First, I would like to express my sincere gratitude to Emanuel Schegloff and Sandra Thompson. It has been a great privilege to learn first-hand from Emanuel Schegloff what doing conversation analysis is all about. I thank Manny for introducing me to conversation analysis, for sharing with me his insights, and for instilling in me the truth-finding spirit. As the old saying goes, "Give a man a fish, and he eats for a day. Teach a man to fish, and he eats for a lifetime." I would like to thank Manny for teaching me to fish.

I am tremendously indebted and grateful to Sandra Thompson for her support and guidance during — and beyond — the dissertation stage. Sandy has shared with me her extensive knowledge of linguistics and Chinese linguistics, and has helped me communicate to audiences in both scholarly communities. I thank Sandy for reading several earlier versions of the current work, and for her invaluable comments and discussions. Her exemplary scholarship and mentorship will always remain with me as a great source of inspiration.

My sincere thanks goes to Charles Goodwin for going out of his way to respond to my inquiries and for his very insightful comments and suggestions. A special word of thanks also to Marianne Celce-Murcia and John Heritage for their long-term support and encouragement.

I also wish to acknowledge a debt to many friends and colleagues who have provided helpful input: Wayne Beach, Steven Clayman, Margaret Field, Jeffrey Kaplan, Irene Koshik, Glen McClish, Deborah Poole, Betty Samraj, and Ruey-hua Wu. My special thanks to Tim McDaniel for his editorial support; he is the kind of friend that people only dream about.

This project was partially supported by a fellowship from UCLA and a micro-grant from the College of Arts and Letters at San Diego State University, for which I am grateful. I would also like to extend my gratitude to my colleagues — and many good friends — at the Department of Linguistics and Oriental Languages at San Diego State University for their support over the years, and to the participants in my data for generously sharing with me a slice of their lives.

Of course, I am the person who is solely responsible for all remaining shortcomings.

Finally, I wish to express my special thanks to my mother, sister, brother and especially my late father, who have been behind me at every step of the way, and to whom I owe more than words could express. Their love has made the completion of this book possible and meaningful. And it is to them that I gratefully dedicate this book.