

Acknowledgements

 <https://doi.org/10.1075/pbns.89.01ack>

Pages ix–x of

Conversational Dominance and Gender: A study of Japanese speakers in first and second language contexts

Hiroko Itakura

[Pragmatics & Beyond New Series, 89] 2001. xviii, 231 pp.

© John Benjamins Publishing Company

This electronic file may not be altered in any way. For any reuse of this material written permission should be obtained from the publishers or through the Copyright Clearance Center (for USA: www.copyright.com).

For further information, please contact rights@benjamins.nl or consult our website at benjamins.com/rights

Acknowledgements

Throughout the process of writing this book, I have received support from numerous people.

I am extremely grateful to Amy Tsui for helping me come to understand and appreciate conversation with her critical, demanding and yet encouraging comments when I was formulating the theoretical framework and synthesise analyses. Without her guidance and vision, this book would never have been possible.

This book also owes a great deal to the participation of the many people who happily agreed to help me collect conversational data. I wish to thank Ian Harrison and Nick Marshall, who helped me record data at Kanda University in Japan, and the students who participated in the recording sessions. I would also like to thank Kevin Forde and Jean Young for helping me record data from their students at the British Council in Hong Kong for a preliminary study.

I would also like to extend my profound appreciations to friends, colleagues and teachers who helped me at various stages of writing this book: to Ron Carter and K. K. Luke for giving me their insightful comments and suggesting the right directions for further research; to Mark Constan, William Littlewood, Peter Grundy who kindly read the earlier drafts of this book and gave me insightful comments; to Tom Lumley, Mr Leung and John Sachs for going through tables and figures used for the quantitative analysis with me and suggesting the right direction for presenting them; to Mari Takayanagi for going through Japanese transcripts and giving me useful suggestions; to Sachiko Nakajima for discussing Japanese transcripts and keeping me informed of the latest developments in the field of Japanese interactional particles; and to Masako Hiraga, Sachiko Ide, Paul Takahara for their contributions.

My heartfelt thanks also go to my friends and colleagues who have given me unfailing support and encouragement, which has enabled me to complete the process of writing this book. Especially, I would like to record my thanks to Liz Walker, Dwight Atkinson, Liz Hamp-Lyons, Ken Hyland, Joachim Lembach, Yuko Miyazoe-Wong, Sima Sengupta, Yoko Tangiku and John Ure.

Above all, I would like to express my sincere gratitude to Andreas Jucker,

Jacob Mey and Isja Conen of Benjamins for providing this opportunity to publish my research and for their helpful advice in the preparation of the manuscript. I am also very grateful to Katsue Reynolds and Anna Trosborg for their comments which substantially improved the earlier drafts of the manuscript.

Last but not the least, I owe my deepest gratitude to Phil Benson who through generosity of his heart, gave me his advice, support and encouragement throughout the entire process of writing this book, even in the most difficult times of our life.