I owe a huge debt of gratitude to a number of people who helped or encouraged me throughout this project in various ways and without who it would not have been completed. It is my greatest pleasure to take the opportunity to thank some of them.

First and foremost, I am very grateful to Joybrato Mukherjee, who has been nothing but supportive of me and my work ever since I started this project. He always gave generously of his time to discuss and shape the major ideas and concepts and always found the time and a way to make things possible. My work has greatly benefited from his thoroughness, ideas and constructive feedback. I am also very grateful to Martina Möllering whose enthusiasm highly motivated me throughout the whole writing process. She warmly welcomed me at her department for two research stays in Sydney and made time to discuss the present study in detail. Without both their enduring support and encouragement, this project would not have been completed and I am highly appreciative of this.

I also owe a great debt to the raters who took part in the time consuming survey and without who this research would not have been possible. I am also very grateful to the CECL team in Louvain-la-Neuve for their support and for providing me with the recordings of LOCNEC, on which the data analysis of this study is based. I am very grateful to Johannes Herrmann for his expert consultations and patience with the statistical calculations which were performed in SPSS. I am also very grateful to Rosemary Bock's native-speaker expertise. She read this manuscript in its entirety and provided me with fantastic feedback and suggestions. Thank you very much, too, to Christiane Brand and Stefanie Dose for giving me invaluable stylistic and content-related feedback on large parts of this manuscript. Thank you, too, to Kees Vaes and Elena Tognini-Bonelli for their support and for admitting this book to this series.

This research was supported by an international Macquarie Research Excellence Scholarship (iMQRES) and a grant from the German Academic Exchange Service (DAAD). This financial support enabled me to conduct two research stays in Sydney in order to perform the experimental analysis. I am extremely grateful for that. Also, I received various grants from the International Graduate Centre for the Study of Culture (GCSC) in Giessen, and from the German Research Foundation (DFG) which gave me the possibility to attend several conferences abroad where I presented the key components of the present research project and received valuable feedback from many colleagues. I am very grateful for this support.

I owe a very special thank you to Dietmar Rösler, whose kind and warm-hearted personality and motivational comments accompanied my studies and research in the most supportive way from day one. I would also like to thank Eva Burwitz-Melzer, Magnus Huber and Henning Lobin for their kindness and support over the years. I am also grateful to Michael Legutke for sharing his motivating enthusiasm.

I am also very grateful to my colleagues at the linguistics department at the University of Giessen: Christiane Brand for always having an open door for me to share and discuss all kinds of things and welcoming me with open arms, Marco Schilk for critically discussing some ideas, Stefanie Dose for many insightful discussions and for her overall support and enthusiasm, Rosemary Bock for her kindness and support on all possible levels, Christopher Koch for technical support and Thorsten Brato, Svetla Rogatcheva, Annette Obert-Sochor, Sven Saage, Kathryn Khairi-Taraki, Viktoria Künstler, Patrick Maiwald, Susanne Kämmerer, Tobias Bernaisch and Simone Müller for providing a very friendly and pleasant work atmosphere in the department. I am also very grateful to my colleagues at Macquarie University, Sydney, Michelle Roberts, Ursula Ibaraki and Jennifer Heward, who were always very friendly and helpful. Thanks are also due to the TechAG for providing the most motivating and comfortable research and discussion forum and for the most pleasant research and dinner meetings. Thank you very much to Nora Benitt, Katrin Biebighäuser, Silke Jahns, Olga Kamarouskaya, Michael Legutke, Gabriela Marques-Schäfer, Eva Platten, Csilla Puskás, Dietmar Rösler, Torben Schmidt, Anne Schröter and Marja Zibelius.

My deepest gratitude goes to all these people who have kept my life in a warm, loving and caring context: I am so grateful to my closest friends and sisters who have accompanied me through the years and who have never turned away. Thank you ever so much for being in my life Alina, Anna, Carmen, Christiane, Doro, Eva, Julia, Kaija, Mary, Steffi, Viveka and Wafaa. Thank you so much, too, to Frank for leaving such huge traces in my life and for shaping the person I am today.

Finally, I owe the greatest debt to my beloved mother. Without a lifetime of her love, support, care, understanding, patience and encouragement, this book would never have seen the daylight.
