The final product that you see here today is nothing, if not the result of a team effort. Contributions have been many and varied: be it with a chapter, with a review, with mentoring, with editorial support, or even with time to help me brainstorm solutions for various challenges. Among many others, I am indebted to Dalila Ayoun, Sara Beaudrie, Melissa Bowles, Barbara Bullock, Jennifer Cabrelli Amaro, José Camacho, María Carreira, Cecilia Colombi, Maite Correa, Alex Cuza, Ana de Prada Pérez, Laura Domínguez, Idoia Elola, Anna María Escobar, Marta Fairclough, Josh Frank, Kim Geeslin, David Giancaspro, Florencia Giglio Henshaw, Inmaculada Gómez Soler, Susan Hendriks, Claudia Holguín, Mike Iverson, Jill Jegerski, Olga Kagan, Gregory Keating, Tanja Kupisch, Jennifer Leeman, Juana Licerias, Amalia Llombart, Gillian Lord, Kelly Lowther Pereira, Andrew Lynch, Silvina Montrul, Julia Oliver Rajan, María Luisa Parra, Masha Polinsky, Kim Potowski, Rajiv Rao, Leah Roberts, Ana Roca, Jason Rothman, Liliana Sánchez, Ana Sánchez Muñoz, Ludovica Serratrice, Rachel Shively, Carmen Silva-Corvalán, Marta Tecedor, Almeida Jacqueline Toribio, Julio Torres, Ianthi Maria Tsimpli, Kees Vaes, Guadalupe Valdés, Elena Valenzuela, Bill VanPatten, Damián Vergara Wilson, and Eve Zyzik.

I am also grateful to my students and colleagues at Texas Tech University. Particularly, I am thankful for the assistance provided by Josh de la Rosa Prada and Cheryl Maqueda during the laborious editing process. Most notably, I'd like to thank Erin Collopy, chair of the Department, for her continuous support on this and on many other projects. I feel mostly indebted to Lloyd Allred, James Lemon, Theresa Madrid, and Stephanie Santos whose help and patience towards me these last few years have been comforting and unfailing.

Finally, I wish to thank Laurie, my beloved wife, whose companionship, support, and advice I most cherish and value.
