Acknowledgments

First and foremost, I want to thank everybody who allowed me to record their conversations – many of them going out of their way to help – and thus provided the basis for this work.

The process of writing would not have been possible without the support of my teachers, colleagues, friends, and family. I owe much to Makoto Hayashi, Andrea Golato, and Irene Koshik for introducing me to the field of Conversation Analysis and inspiring me to write this book. Andrea Golato supported me throughout graduate school and beyond. What I learned from her as a scholar and a teacher has been invaluable. I want to thank those who helped in the data collection process, discussed data or ideas with me, and critically read part or all of this work: Tobias Barske, Claudia Bornholdt, Makoto Hayashi, Amanda Huensch, Hedwig Hotz, Marianne Kalinke, Irene Koshik, Numa Markee, Thomas Parker, Mi-Suk Seo, and Alfred Simonis. The participants at the 2006 Conversation Analysis Advanced Study Institute and at numerous other data sessions helped me develop some of my ideas and collect additional data examples. I also wish to thank Sandy Thompson for providing much encouragement and feedback, and Isja Conen, the editor at Benjamins, for guiding me through the publication process.

I am grateful to my friends and family who provided welcome distractions from this work, especially Tobias and Valerie Barske, Amanda Huensch and Alex Parker, Joan and Michael Parker, Hedwig and Michael Hotz, and Maria Simonis. My most heartfelt thanks goes to Thomas Parker, to whom I dedicate this book.
