First of all, I would like to thank the CNRS laboratory Savoirs, Textes, Langage and its current director, Professor Christian Berner, for providing me with excellent working conditions during the writing of this book.

This work would not have been possible without the guidance of Philip H. Miller, who led me down the path of research in linguistics. To him, I express my most heartfelt gratitude.

Special thanks go also to Sandra A. Thompson, editor for the Studies in Discourse and Grammar series: her valuable comments on the first draft of the manuscript led to significant improvements.

The research at the heart of this book has also been enriched by numerous exchanges and discussions with colleagues from various universities where my research was presented, both at international conferences and laboratory seminars. In particular, I would like to thank Doug Arnold, Anton Benz, Pierre Cotte, Ilse Depraetere, Liliane Haegeman, Anne Jugnet, Mai Kuha, Peter Kühnlein, Maarten Lemmens, Emmanuelle Mathiot, Kathleen M. O'Connor, Ellen F. Prince, Fayssal Tayalati, Chrysanthie Therapontos and Danièle Van de Velde. Special thanks go to Cyril Auran of the joint research program on the discourse-prosody interface that provided challenging material for my work.

I would also like to thank Chad Langford, who accepted the tedious task of proofreading the first draft of the manuscript.

Finally, I would like to thank my family and friends for their unfailing support and encouragement.
