Preface & Acknowledgments

The idea for this book was first conceived around 2001 at the end of my doctoral studies, and grew out of an earlier interest in grammatical gender. A great many people have helped me along the way with my present work and other related projects. In particular, I would like to thank (in alphabetical order): Karen Adams, Alexandra Aikhenvald, Michael Barany, Wallace Chafe, Michael Cysouw, Ives Goddard, Mike Hornsby, Brian D. Joseph, John E. Joseph, Chris Koops, Regine Koroma, Maarten Kossmann, Marianne Mithun, Michael Silverstein, Joseph Subbiondo, Yishai Tobin, Peter Trudgill, Ljuba Veselinova and Richard Vinson.

I would especially like to thank Ellen Contini-Morava and my wife Anna Kilarska for reading the entire draft of this book and offering helpful comments and suggestions. I also appreciate the constructive comments, questions, examples and references suggested by two anonymous reviewers and E. Wyn Roberts.

I am also grateful to Patrick Conlon, Piotr Jopkiewicz, Carita Klippi, Marcin Overgaard Ptaszyński, Ben Paflin, Elżbieta Roguszczak and Richard Vinson for their help with the translation of Danish, French, German and Latin quotations. Very special thanks are due to the Editor of the series, E. F. K. Koerner, for soliciting the anonymous reports on an earlier draft as well as his careful attention to detail and encouragement during the preparation of the final version of the book.

In addition to my home base, the Faculty of English at Adam Mickiewicz University in Poznań, research on this project was conducted in 2005–2006 as part of a Fulbright grant at the University of New Mexico, Albuquerque, in 2006–2007 at the University of Surrey, Guildford, and during the summers of 2007 through 2010 at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. I appreciate the assistance of several colleagues at these institutions, especially Katarzyna Dziubalska-Kołaczyk, Piotr Gąsiorowski, Przemysław Kaszubski, Joseph Kuhn, Melissa Axelrod, Greville Corbett, Daniel Rubin and Sarah Thomason. My special thanks go to the Interlibrary Loan staff at the University of New Mexico for their help in locating many of the items in the bibliography.
