
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The author gratefully acknowledges invitations to present some of these chapters to colleagues and the opportunities to benefit from comment and critique: the Lutheran School of Theology at Chicago, the Divinity School of the University of Chicago, the Universités of Geneva and Lausanne, the Centro Italiano di Studi Superiori sulle Religioni, the Ancient Documentary Research Centre (Macquarie University), the Humboldt University of Berlin, the Meals in the Greco-Roman World Section and the Ancient Economy Group of the Society of Biblical Literature, the Epigraphy and Papyrology Group of the Studiorum Novi Testamenti Societas, and the Columbia-Union New Testament Seminar.

My colleagues in the Context Group read parts of this book and generously provided many suggestions and criticism: Scott Bartchy, Richard DeMaris, Harry Maier, Steven Muir, Douglas Oakman, Stephen Patterson, Sarah Rollens, and Daniel Ullucci. I am also grateful to the numerous kindnesses of William E. Arnal, Richard S. Ascough, David L. Balch, Giovanni Bazzana, Brigidda Bell, Andreas Bendlin, Christer Bruun, Callie Callon, Alison Cleverley, Christopher Cornthwaite, Zeba Crook, Philip Harland, Albert Harrill, Emily Hemilrijk, Marsha Hewitt, Edwin Judge, Connor Kokot, Christina Kreinecker, Richard Last, Kirill Lepekhin, Jinyu Liu, Bruce Longenecker, Mariana Mastagar, Anna Miller, Stephen Mitchell, Mark Mueller, Markus Öhler, Ryan Olfert, Steven Payne, Mauro Pesce, Anders Runesson, Colleen Shantz, Patrick Stange, Jason Yuh, Larry Welborn, Michael White, and Arjan Zuiderhoek. The two anonymous readers for Yale University Press provided many helpful suggestions for improvements.

A special note of thanks is due to Pasquale Manilo, Custode di Necropoli di Porto, who graciously allowed me access to the Isola Sacra, and to Dr. Giorgio

Filippi, curator of the Musei Vaticani's epigraphic collection, who arranged access to see the Lex collegi Aesculapi et Hygiae in the Museo Pio Clementino, Gabinetto dell'Apoxyomenos, normally closed to the public. Through the kind permission of Claudio Parisi Presicce, Sovrintendente di Archivio Fotografico dei Musei Capitolini, I have been able to print the photographs of NCE 2594 (fig. 3) and NCE 7080 (fig. 4). Dr. Federico Frasson graciously provided permission to use his photographs of CIL 11.1355a,b (fig. 7).

This book draws on research already published and under way: a five-volume edition of primary texts, J. S. Kloppenborg, R. S. Ascough, and P. A. Harland, Greco-Roman Associations: Texts, Translations, and Commentary (Berlin: Walter de Gruyter, 2011–), the first two volumes of which are now in print (GRA I, II); and a teaching-oriented English edition of more than three hundred association inscriptions and papyri, Associations in the Greco-Roman World: A Sourcebook (AGRW). Waco, Tex.: Baylor University Press, 2012. The English translations from AGRW are reproduced by permission of Carey Newman and Baylor University Press.

Finally, thanks are due to Heather Gold, who has shepherded this volume through production, and to Jessie Dolch and Susan Laity, for their careful copy- and production editing of the manuscript. Christina Gousopoulos read through the proofs, saving me from various errors and oversights.