

NOTE ON THE TEXT

Most spelling as well as some capitalization and grammar have been modernized from eighteenth-century quotations for the sake of clarity. As Great Britain followed the Julian calendar until 1752, all dates before that year are given in the “Old Style.” However, to avoid confusion, the year is given with the new year beginning on January 1 rather than March 25.

This page intentionally left blank