

Acknowledgments

From Alice: I am extremely grateful to San Francisco State University for providing me with release time and financial assistance by way of several awards that made research and editorial work on this project possible—the Sabbatical Award (2012), Presidential Award (2008), Summer Stipend (2008), and Faculty Affirmative Action Award (2007)—and to the Department of Philosophy and its faculty and students for being tireless supporters of diversity in the discipline. I wish to thank several students who either contributed to conversations about the initial composition of the volume, did editorial work during its completion, or both—Rachel Buddeberg, Elizabeth Hedrick Moser, Syl Kocięda, Helen Sakkaris, and Allison Sherman. I am deeply indebted to Nancy Tuana, who paved the way for this volume with her vision for the series and who enthusiastically supported this volume from its inception to its completion. For their careful eyes in preparing this manuscript, I wish to extend my thanks to Laura Anne Reed-Morrisson, managing editor, Hannah Hebert, editorial assistant, and Kathryn Gucer, copyeditor, at the Pennsylvania State University Press. Two anonymous referees from the press provided many valuable suggestions for improvement, and for this I am grateful. Finally, many thanks to Penny for her work on and enthusiasm for this volume.

From Penny: Thanks to Berenice Carroll and Hilda Smith, with whom I first read Astell, and to my many students who read her with me, in turn. Many thanks to Alice for carrying this book across the finish line.
