

Acknowledgments

We are deeply grateful to the following individuals for allowing us to render their stories—either personal or created as ethics cases—in comic form: Dennis L. Gingrich, M.D., for Battered Trust; Benjamin H. Levi, M.D., Ph.D., for Sneaking Suspicion; Laura T. Blanchard, M.D., for personal details in Sneaking Suspicion; and Dennis H. Novack, M.D., and Janet Fleetwood, Ph.D., for Charting Courses.

We also offer warm thanks to our ethicist colleagues in the Department of Humanities at Penn State College of Medicine—Michael J. Green, M.D.; Benjamin H. Levi, M.D., Ph.D.; and Rebecca Volpe, Ph.D.—whose expert framing of ethical issues in their Medical Ethics and Professionalism course is reflected in the brief essays that accompany each comic. Your disciplinary expertise and pedagogical creativity are foundational to this work.

This book would not exist without generous grants from the Doctors Kienle Center for Humanistic Medicine (Penn State College of Medicine) and the Oregon Health and Science University that funded the majority of Zoe's drawing. Thanks for your support!

We would like to acknowledge the Doctors Kienle Center for Humanistic Medicine further for sponsoring Molly and Charlotte as Kienle visiting scholars, enabling them to come to Penn State College of Medicine in 2017 to work with Kimberly in order to move this project forward. It was during this time that we connected with Zoe.

Our respective institutions have facilitated our work in important ways. Molly gives special thanks to the VA Portland Health Care System for supporting the Integrated Ethics Program and giving her the opportunity to share published vignettes in teaching and at ethics conferences. Charlotte thanks the Department of General Internal Medicine, Boston University School of Medicine, and Boston Medical Center for supporting the academic time she dedicated to this project. And Kimberly thanks the Department of Humanities, Penn State College of Medicine, and the Pennsylvania State University for providing a sabbatical to complete this book. Special thanks to Michael Green for his support as interim department chair and for helpful feedback on the penultimate drafts of comics and essays.

We're grateful to the editorial collective of the Penn State University Press Graphic Medicine series for believing in our project and to assistant director and editor in chief at PSUP, Kendra Boileau, for her guidance through each phase of this work.

Jim Thomas, retired dean of fine arts, gifted us with his time and sharp editorial skills by reading the manuscript and offering excellent insights from the perspective of a lay reader, the core of our intended audience. Thanks, Jim!

Finally, we thank Penny Williamson, Ph.D., for convening and nurturing the “Courage to Lead” community on Cape Cod, where Charlotte, Molly, and Kimberly first met and where this project was born.
