

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This book represents the extraordinary efforts of many individuals and organizations over many years. As explained in the introduction, its foundation was an exhibition titled The Art of Ceremony: Regalia of Native Oregon that originated at the Hallie Ford Museum of Art at Willamette University in 2008. I appreciate the many people who gave generously of their time and knowledge to make both the exhibition and the book The Art of Ceremony: Voices of Renewal from Indigenous Oregon a success. Some of those named below have passed since this project began and I wish especially to acknowledge their contributions. My hope is that this book will honor their work and lives. I apologize for any omissions or errors, and I am ultimately responsible for the interpretations presented here.

I thank all the community curators associated with each of the nine federally recognized Tribes in Oregon who served as key advisers to the exhibition and book project: the late Minerva Teeman Soucie, Diane Teeman (Burns Paiute); Jesse Beers, Margaret Corvi, Courtney Krossman, Sue Perry Olson, David Petrie (Confederated Tribes of Coos, Lower Umpqua, and Siuslaw Indians); Denni Hockema, Brenda Meade, Lyman Meade (Coquille Indian Tribe); Louis LaChance, Rhonda Richardson, Michael Rondeau, Sherri Shaffer (Cow Creek Band of Umpqua Tribe of Indians); Tony Johnson (Chinook Nation); Bobby Mercier, members of the Grand Ronde and Chinook Canoe Families, Lindy Trolan (Confederated Tribes of the Grand Ronde Community of Oregon); Perry Chocktoot, Gerald Skelton (Klamath Tribes); Robert Kentta, Alfred “Bud” Lane III, Alfred “Buddy” Lane IV, Alissa Lane, Cheryl Lane (Confederated Tribes of Siletz Indians); Roberta “Bobbie” Conner, Dallas Dick, Randall Melton, Malissa Minthorn-Winks, Susan Sheoships, Marjorie Wahleneka (Tamástslikt Cultural Institute, Confederated Tribes of the Umatilla Indian Reservation); and Carol Leone, Natalie Moody, atwai Evaline Patt, Rosalind Sampson, Elizabeth Woody (The Museum at Warm Springs, Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs). I am deeply grateful to Alfred “Bud” Lane III for his friendship and guidance over the years and for writing the foreword. I’m profoundly thankful to Roberta “Bobbie” Conner for writing the afterword and for her brilliant intellect, whose imprint is all over this book. The staff of the Office of Indian Education in the Oregon Department of Education, April Campbell, Ramona Halcomb, Trinity Minihan, and Deleana Otherbull, graciously read through the entire manuscript and generously contributed a Reflection. I am so appreciative of the work all these remarkable people do every day.

In addition, I thank the following individuals and families who contributed their knowledge by participating in interviews and other conversations that informed this book: Doug Barrett, Brenda Brainard, Courtney Krossman, Patricia Whereat Phillips, Ashley Russell, John Schaefer, Sara Siestreem, Don “Doc” Slyter (Confederated Tribes of Coos, Lower Umpqua, and Siuslaw Indians); Anne Burnette Niblett, the late Don Ivy, Shirod Younker (Coquille Indian Tribe); the late Del “Red Hawk” Ansures, Elaine Davis, Larry Davis, Elizabeth (Beth) Gipson, Cindy Delay Grizzle, Mary Dumont Howren, the late Charles “Chuck” Jackson, Clara Young Keller, the late Clementine Young Rice, Michael Rondeau, Sherry Shaffer, the late Ralph Young (Cow Creek Band of Umpqua Indians); Kathryn Harrison, Cristina Lara, Lisa Leno, Bob Tom (Confederated Tribes of the Grand Ronde Community of Oregon); Don Gentry, Jeff Mitchell, Taylor R. Tupper (Klamath Tribes); Dee Pigsley (Confederated Tribes of Siletz Indians); John Bevis, Phillip Cash Cash, Atway Alphonse Halfmoon, Linda Jones, Les Minthorn, Toby Patrick, Lona Pond, Dr. Ronald Pond, Marjorie Wahleneka, Ramona Yeager (Confederated Tribes of the Umatilla Indian Reservation); and Rosalind (Rosie) Johnson, Rayann Katchia Satanus, Brigette McConville (Confederated Tribes of the Warm Springs Reservation). I also thank Donna Fields (Cow Creek Band of Umpqua Indians) and Bridgett Wheeler (Coquille Indian Tribe) for their help in getting the book to its final stages.

I thank all the artists who created the regalia as well as the individuals and families who generously loaned their most precious treasures for the exhibition, thus inspiring so many people: Duane Alderman, Steve Allely, Victor Bates, John Bevis, Gladys Bolton, Jenn Branting, Kitzen Branting, Laura Bremner, Heather Butler, Lillie Butler, Reggie Butler Sr., Reggie Butler Jr., Perry Chocktoot, Joan Deroko, Cindy Elbert, Frank Gist Jr., the Grand Ronde and Chinook Canoe Families, Betty and Eric Hawley and the family of Agnes Benning Hawley, Phillip and Clara Hawks, Margie Houston, the Tony and Mechele Johnson family, Robert Kentta, Brian Krehbiel, Louis LaChance, Alfred “Bud” Lane III, Alissa Lane, Kelly Laura, Molly Leno, Carol Lindhorse, Nan MacDoald, Jackie Many Hides, Bradley Marshall, Deborah McConnell, Brenda Meade, Lyman Meade, Sarah Meade, Bobby Mercier, Les Minthorn, Mavis Oard, Sue Perry Olson, Red Man, Arlissa Rhoan, Mitzi Shoemake, Gerald D. Skelton, the late Minerva Soucie, Crystal Szczepanski, Courtney Terry, and Vi Wasamundt.

I thank all those who shared their artistic practice with the public and with one another during the exhibition’s tenure and thus contributed to conversations about regalia-making and the art of ceremony, including many of those already named as well as the following: Sara Barton, Judy Berg, Beth Coahran, Amelia Colwash, Gloria Doughty, the late Connie Graves, Merle Kirk, Roberta Kirk, Karen Nisson, Olivia Wallulatum, and Fred Wallulatum.

I give thanks to the individuals and families who have donated objects to The Museum at Warm Springs that were included in the original Art of Ceremony exhibition: Susan Coronado, Harrison Davis, Larry Dick, Pauline Hoptowit, Geraldine Jim, Catherine Katchia, Ursula Little, Adeline Miller, Harry Miller, Marena Miller, Robert Miller, Art Mitchell, Bernice Mitchell, Elfrieda Mitchell, Rose Mitchell, Robert Ogle, Arlita Rhoan, Beatrice Scott, Wilma Scott, Norma Smith, Ada Sooksoit, Eileen Spino, the Brian Stovall Collection, Phyllis Strong, Davis Stwyer, Pat Tanewasha, Yvonne Tapedo, Emma Telakish, Loretta Tewee, Caroline Tohet, Ina Tohet, Grant Wahleneka, Virgil Windyboy, and Josie Wolfe.

I also thank the individuals and families who have donated objects to the Tamástslíkt Cultural Institute that were included in the exhibition: B. F. Bowman, Les Minthorn, William and Vivian Minthorn, and Malissa Minthorn.

The photographs in this book are an enormous part of its power. In particular, Frank Miller, who was Willamette University's staff photographer from 2002 to 2020, was an essential part of this effort over many years. I am tremendously grateful to him and to all the photographers who have contributed work: Michelle Alaimo, Joel Davis, Micah Fischer, Dave Fullerton, the late Don Ivy, Jonathon Ivy, Alissa Lane, Douglas Manger, Toby McClary, Peter Murphy, Anne Burnette Niblett, Dale Peterson, Rhonda Richardson, Ashley Russell, John Schaefer, Sara Siestroom, Christopher Tanner, Taylor R. Tupper, and Patrice Hall Walters.

The staff of the Hallie Ford Museum of Art at Willamette University has been foundational to this entire project, and I cannot express my thanks enough for the teamwork and camaraderie we share. I especially thank director John Olbrantz, who never hesitated to say "yes" to almost anything. In addition, my gratitude goes to Jonathan Bucci, the late David Andersen (who we lost far too early in 2017), Elizabeth Garrison, Leslie Whitaker, and all the students who worked on phases of this project over the years, especially Stephanie Brown, Rachael Lew, Madelyn Malone, Rachel Mayer, and Emily Schmierer. Conservator Tom Fuller played an essential role in caring for much of the regalia that was included in and photographed for the exhibition.

The University of Washington Press staff has been beyond patient and supportive of this entire endeavor. Larin McLaughlin, Neecole Bostick, and Joeth Zucco were vital guides and cheerleaders in the final phases of the book. Regan Huff, formerly of UW Press, was the first editor with whom I worked, and I doubt I would have felt able to even begin such an ambitious project if it were not for her encouragement. Copy editors Nick Allison and Sigrid Asmus played crucial roles as manuscript wranglers, over a period of years, and I am so grateful for their support. Many thanks also to copy editor Amy Smith Bell, indexer Chris Dodge, and book designer M. Wright for bringing this work to light. In addition, I thank the anonymous readers who reviewed the book while in manuscript form; their care and professional engagement with this work improved it significantly.

The preparation of this book was supported by a Cultural Development Grant from the Oregon Cultural Trust in 2015–2016 and, from Willamette University, a grant from the Center for the Study of Religion, Law, and Democracy in 2012–2013 and sabbatical leaves in 2015 and 2019. An Earle A. Chiles Award in 2012, given by the High Desert Museum, offered resources that launched this book's early stages. The 2008 exhibition from which this project grew was supported by the National Endowment for the Arts American Masterpieces grant, awarded by the Oregon Arts Commission, and additional funds came from an endowment gift to the Hallie Ford Museum of Art by the Confederated Tribes of Grand Ronde through their Spirit Mountain Community Fund, and by grants from the Siletz Tribal Charitable Fund, the city of Salem's Transient Occupancy Tax funds, the Oregon Arts Commission, the William and Flora Hewlett Foundation, and a Milliecent C. McIntosh Fellowship from the Woodrow Wilson Foundation.

Finally, at the core, is my family, born and chosen, including those who have passed but who live through memory. I am grateful every day for the gift of my late parents R. E. and Betty Brooke Dobkins, my late brother Brooke Dobkins, sisters Susan and Louise Dobkins and Eve Ash and their families, my son Elijah Dobkins, and for Francesca Freccero. Close colleagues at Willamette have been more support than they will ever know, especially my "sabbatical gang" of Jade Aguilar, Jonneke Koomen, and Courtney Stevens, and my extended family of Vincent Pham, Yaejoon Kwon, Jovin Pham-Kwon, and Omari Weekes. Carol Murdock arrived just at the perfect time, in the final laps. The members of the Native American Advisory Council at Willamette as well as the family of scholars associated with the Native American Art Studies Association have been vital to my intellectual and personal well-being over the past several decades. The "Fellowship of the Rim"—the whanau (family) of artists and cultural workers involved in the Pacific Rim international Indigenous exchanges—deserve rich thanks for all the ways they have made the world a more beautiful place. I give special thanks to Lillian Pitt and Darcy Nicholas for connecting so many of us and to the late Waana Davis for her visionary leadership. To all, my deepest gratitude.
