

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

THE EDITORS and contributors wish to express their gratitude to:

Theodor Ernst Mommsen, for having first suggested to the editors the usefulness of a symposium on interwar diplomacy, and Datus C. Smith and Joseph R. Strayer for having seconded the suggestion so enthusiastically; the Research Committee of Princeton University, the Rutgers University Research Council, the Board of Directors of the American Philosophical Society, and Edward F. D'Arms and the Board of Directors of the Rockefeller Foundation for grants in aid of research and assistance in meeting necessary travel and conference expenses;

Bernard C. Noble and Bernadotte Schmitt of the Division of Historical Policy Research, the Department of State, for permitting the use of certain papers bearing on the Japanese problem; the Swedish Foreign Office for allowing one of the contributors to have access to its files; and Herman Kahn, Director of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library, Hyde Park, N.Y., for assistance and advice to several of the contributors;

Alexis Saint-Léger Léger and Joseph Clark Grew for their interest and counsel; and Walter Johnson and the Directors of Houghton Mifflin Company for having made available to the editors the proofs of Mr. Grew's Turbulent Era: A Diplomatic Record of Forty Years, which has now been published under the editorship of Professor Johnson;

Allen Macy Dulles, for information included in his unpublished Princeton B.A. thesis on the British Foreign Office; and Robert B. Glynn, for permitting the use of his unpublished Harvard honors thesis on Nevile Henderson;

Fred Aandahl, Gerald Aylmer, Cyril E. Black, Percy Corbett, Edward Mead Earle, Carl Hillger, Leonard Krieger, Philip Noel Buxton, E. S. Passant, Raymond J. Sontag, Jacob Viner, John W. Wheeler-Bennett and Sir Llewellyn Woodward for information and advice; and

Elizabeth D'Arcy and Mrs. Benton Schrader of Princeton, N.J., Joan Connolly of Bryn Mawr College, and Patricia and Gordon Decato of Keene, N.H. for typing, and retyping, the manuscript; and Harriet Anderson for seeing it through the press.

For the shortcomings of the book, none of the individuals or institutions mentioned above can be held accountable; but, if this volume makes any contribution to our knowledge of the recent past, they deserve much of the credit.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS