

ILLUSTRATIONS

1.1a. The shrine of Mary that Athanasius Kircher discovered at Mentorella	3
1.1b. The shrine of Mary, showing the church's location and detailed ground plan	4
1.2. The oak relief from the church Kircher discovered	7
1.3. Kircher's reproduction of the oak relief	8
1.4. Blood sacrifice before a priapic statue, from Francesco Colonna's Hypnerotomachia Poliphili	16
1.5. Two women kneel as they dedicate candles to an image of the Virgin and child (drawing by Hans Holbein)	28
1.6. Road workers discover a Roman tomb with wall paintings in 1674	31
1.7. John Dee annotates Cicero's account of discovering the tomb of Archimedes at Syracuse	34
2.1. Sicco Polenton describes the discovery of Livy's bones to Niccolò Niccoli	46
2.2. Giovanni Gioviano Pontano's chapel in Naples, where Livy's arm was buried	55
2.3. A copy of the lost Latin inscription for Livy's arm	55
2.4a. The mid-fifteenth-century relief sculpture of Livy on the wall of the Palazzo della Ragione in Padua	60
2.4b. Livy's monument inside the Palazzo della Ragione, as it was from 1547 on	61
3.1. A drawing of the body of a Roman woman found on the Appian Way in 1485	83
3.2. Hartmann Schedel records the purported monument of a Roman woman, Julia Prisca Clodia	93

4.1. The Veronica: the cloth imprinted with an image of the face of Jesus, which was displayed at Saint Peter's Basilica	119
4.2. Pope Innocent VIII carries the Holy Lance to the Basilica of Saint Peter in 1492	120
4.3. The tip of the Holy Lance	121
4.4. The relics, vestments, and insignia of the Holy Roman Empire, preserved at Nuremberg, with the Holy Lance in the center	122
4.5. The annual display of Nuremberg's most precious relics, on a heavily guarded temporary platform	128
4.6. A very rough diagram of the Titulus of the True Cross	130
4.7. A woodcut offering what it describes as a facsimile of the Titulus of the True Cross	147
4.8. Another woodcut facsimile of the Titulus	148
4.9. A third woodcut of the Titulus , in which the Greek and Hebrew texts have been corrected	150
4.10. A woodcut of the Titulus with a guide to pronunciation of the Greek and Hebrew and instructions for devotional use of the image	151
4.11. Michelangelo's version of the Titulus , from the Sacristy at Santo Spirito	153
4.12. The Titulus , as reproduced in a print facsimile commissioned by Markus Welser	160
5.1. The Borgo, as represented by Filarete on the bronze door he crafted for Old Saint Peter's Basilica	165
5.2. The pedestal of a lost statue by Lysippos, with its Greek inscription translated into Latin	170
5.3. The Laocoon, as it looks now	175
5.4. An image of the Laocoon published by Bartolomeo Marliani in 1544	184

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS [ ix ]

6.1. Men enter grottoes, torches in hand, to study the paintings on their roofs and vaults	194
6.2. A painted vault from Nero's Golden House	196
6.3. The arch in Pinturicchio's Adoration of the Child with St. Jerome , decorated with imagery from the Golden House	197
6.4. A sculpted monster from a Paduan workshop	203
6.5. Samples of Roman decoration, reproduced and defended by Sebastiano Serlio	211
6.6. The title page of a collection of ornament prints, with images from the Golden House	213
6.7. An anonymous antiquarian laments his inability to draw ancient busts with sufficient artistry	218
6.8. An antiquarian gives a parodic location for an inscription: on Mount Olympus	221
6.9. A design from the Yellow Vault of the Golden House, as reproduced in the Codex Escorialensis	223
6.10. Pinturicchio sketches abstract designs and a face, drawing on his exploration of the Golden House	224
7.1. The very grand tomb of William Warham, archbishop of Canterbury	230
8.1. The emperor Maximilian I, depicted by Hans Burgmair the Elder as he reveres the Seamless Robe of Jesus at Trier	249
8.2. The Igel Column near Trier: one of the many Roman antiquities in the region	255
8.3a. An image of the Seamless Robe of Jesus, from Johann Adelphus Muling's account of its rediscovery	268
8.3b. Detail showing the characters that Adelphus saw on the Seamless Robe, resembling the Hebrew letter shin	269

[ x ] LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS

8.4. The Seamless Robe of Jesus from Johannes Enen's Medulla (1514)	270
9.1a. Athanasius Kircher depicts Lake Nemi as it was in Roman times	286
9.1b. Another depiction of Lake Nemi, with the machinery used by Leon Battista Alberti in his failed attempt to raise Roman ships from the bottom of the lake	287
9.2a. An inscription at Glastonbury, from which this image was directly printed	294
9.2b. An offset image of the Glastonbury inscription, in which the text goes from left to right	295
9.3. A reconstruction of the oldest Christian church, built by Joseph of Arimathea at Glastonbury	296