
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

An early version of a section of chapter 2, entitled “From Enjoyment to Aggressivity: The Emergence of the New Father in Contemporary American Society,” appeared in the Journal for the Psychoanalysis of Culture and Society 3.1 (Spring 1998): 53–60. An early version of a section of chapter 7 appeared as “In That Way He Lost Everything’: The Price of Satisfaction in E. L. Doctorow’s World’s Fair” in Critique: Studies in Contemporary Fiction 42 (2001): 233–40 (reprinted with permission of the Helen Dwight Reid Educational Foundation and published by Heldref Publications, 1319 18th Street, NW, Washington, DC 20036, Copyright 2001). An early version of a section of chapter 8, entitled “The Phenomenology of City Life: The Reign of the Imaginary in Trigger Effect,” appeared in The Spectator 18.1 (Fall/Winter 1997): 51–57. And revised portions of an essay entitled “The Master Amid Rumors of His Demise: Politics in a Time of ‘Satisfaction,’” published in the Journal for the Psychoanalysis of Culture and Society 4.1 (Spring 1999): 72–80, appear throughout the book. Thanks to all of these journals for permission to publish this material.

I would like to thank my graduate theory classes at Southwest Texas State University for their insights into Lacan that made a direct impact on this book. Thanks especially to Phil Foster for taking the knife to the project.

I am indebted to James Peltz at SUNY Press for being the kind of editor that one dare not even hope for and for helping to create one of the few contemporary homes for psychoanalytic theory.

Thanks to Jean Wyatt for a reading that brought everything into focus for me.

Thanks to Mike Ashooh and Quentin Martin for having the kindness to be cruel and offering readings that forced me to change everything at the moment I thought it was finished.

Finally, thanks to Walter Davis, Paul Eisenstein, and Hilary Neroni, the three people who have informed every word of this project.