

Contributors

DAVID P. BARRETT is Associate Professor of History, McMaster University, Hamilton, Ontario. He is the author of articles on Hu Hanmin and on the Wang Jingwei collaborationist regime. He has completed a translation of the memoirs of General Vasilii Chuikov, adviser to Chiang Kai-shek.

TIMOTHY BROOK is Professor of Chinese History at the University of Toronto, Toronto, Ontario. Most recently he is the author of The Confusions of Pleasure: Commerce and Culture in Ming China and co-editor of China and Historical Capitalism: Genealogies of Sinological Knowledge, and Nation Work: Asian Elites and National Identities.

PARKS M. COBLE is Professor of History at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Nebraska. He is the author of The Shanghai Capitalists and the Nationalist Government of China, 1927–1937; and Facing Japan: Chinese Politics and Japanese Imperialism, 1931–1937.

MARJORIE DRYBURGH is Lecturer in Chinese History in the School of East Asian Studies, University of Sheffield, U.K. She is the author of North China and Japanese Expansion, 1933–1937.

POSHEK FU teaches history and film culture at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. He is the author of Passivity, Resistance and Collaboration: Intellectual Choices in Occupied Shanghai, 1937–1945 and co-editor of The Cinema of Hong Kong: History, Arts, and Identity.

HUANG MEIZHEN is Professor Emeritus of History, Fudan University, Shanghai, China. He is the editor or author of more than fifty works in Chinese on the Republican period, many of them dealing with wartime collaboration.

LO JIU-JUNG is Associate Research Fellow in the Institute of Modern History, Academic Sinica, Taipei. She has published a number of articles in Chinese on the topic of collaboration in China and is currently working on a book on the postwar trials of the leading collaborationists.

R. KEITH SCHOPPA is Edward and Catherine Doehler Chair in Asian History at Loyola College, Baltimore. He is the author of Chinese Elites and Political Change; Xiang Lake—Nine Centuries of Chinese Life; and Blood Road: The Mystery of Shen Dingyi in Revolutionary China, for which he received the Association for Asian Studies Levenson Prize in 1997.

PETER J. SEYBOLT is Professor of History and Director of Asian Studies at the University of Vermont. He is the author of Throwing the Emperor from his Horse: Portrait of a Village Leader in China and numerous other works on modern and contemporary China.

LARRY N. SHYU is Professor Emeritus of History, University of New Brunswick, Canada. He is co-editor of three volumes of proceedings of the Canadian Asian Studies Association East Asia Council and the author of a number of articles on Taiwan and on the Overseas Chinese.

WANG KE-WEN is Associate Professor of History at St. Michael's College, Colchester, Vermont. He is editor of Modern China: An Encyclopedia of History, Culture and Nationalism and the author of numerous articles in English and Chinese on the Nationalist era.

ODORIC Y. K. WOU is Professor of History at Rutgers University/Newark. He is the author of Militarism in Modern China: The Career of Wu P'ei-fu, 1916–1939 and Mobilizing the Masses: Building Revolution in Henan. He is currently working on a book on the Communist revolution in Shangcheng County, Henan.

YANG HANQING teaches at the Guangzhou Municipal College of Management (Guangzhou Shi Xingzheng Xueyuan). He has written extensively in Chinese on the early years of the Sino-Japanese War, with emphasis on Sino-Japanese peace negotiations.

Chinese Collaboration with Japan, 1932–1945