

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments ix

Introduction: I'm Really a Queen Myself 1

PART 1

Film Noir and the Political Economy of Cold War Masculinity 21

1 Masculinizing the American Dream: Discourses of Resistance in the Cold War Era 23

2 Resisting the Lure of the Commodity: Laura and the Spectacle of the Gay Male Body 55

3 "Real American History": Crossfire and the Increasing Invisibility of Gay Men in the Cold War Era 79

PART 2

Gay Male Cultural Production in the Cold War Era 105

4 Tennessee Williams and the Politics of the Closet 107

5 Gore Vidal and the Erotics of Masculinity 135

6 A Negative Relation to One's Culture: James Baldwin and the Homophobic Politics of Form 160

Conclusion: The Work of Transformation 191

Notes 199

Index 237

