

Acknowledgments

This volume has its origins in a cooperative venture between the newly established Australian Research Council's Special Research Centre, the Centre for Cross-Cultural Research at the Australian National University, and the Queensland Museum. On 8 and 9 November 1997 a conference was held at the museum, convened by Michael Aird (Queensland Museum), Nicholas Thomas (director of the Centre for Cross-Cultural Research), and Nicolas Peterson (School of Archaeology and Anthropology, Australian National University) under the title Looking through Photographs: Indigenous Histories, Presences, and Representations. Among the wide range of papers presented were a number from practicing Aboriginal photographers, some of which have since been published elsewhere. This volume includes a selection of papers presented at the conference, along with two new papers, and reprints of three seminal essays that relate to the theme of the volume.

We are indebted to a wide range of people for assistance in preparing this volume. The conference would not have been possible without the generous funding and support of the Centre for Cross-Cultural Research and its director. The Queensland Museum generously hosted it. For organizing the conference we would particularly like to thank Jenny Newell, who did a marvellous job of overseeing its smooth operation and then followed this with the preliminary work on the preparation of this volume. Ian Bryson, Tsari Anderson, and Sally Ward also ably assisted in the production of this volume.

We would also like to thank the editor of African Arts and Marilyn Houlberg for permission to reprint Stephen Sprague's essay, which appeared in African Arts 12 (1) (1978); Deborah Poole and the editor of Representations for permission to reprint an abridged version of her essay, which appeared in Representations 38 (spring 1992); and Hulleah J. Tsinhnahjinnie and the editor of Native Nations: Journeys in American Photography (1998; edited by Jane Alison; London: Barbican Art Gallery) for permission to reprint her essay.