

Acknowledgments

During the early 1990s I delivered sections of this book at more universities than it would be prudent to mention, and many conversations changed the ways the Queen now appears. Each chapter has its own set of acknowledgments: for reading large chunks or the book as a whole, I thank the Feminism and Visual Culture group at Chicago (Beth Helsing, Laura Rigal, Martha Ward); the Center for the Critical Analysis of Contemporary Culture seminar at Rutgers (especially Neil Smith, George Levine, Tim Brennan, Jaime Hovey); and my most excellent reading group comrades at the University of Michigan (Fernando Coronil, Roger Rouse, David Scobey, Julie Skurski).

I must also thank individual friends and colleagues. Tom Stillinger was my closest interlocutor during the book's early years, and I am profoundly indebted to his wisdom, support, and sheer hard work. Ben Anderson, Mandy Berry, Geoff Eley, Beth Freeman, Jody Greene, Elaine Hadley, June Howard, Mary Poovey, Eve Sedgwick, Dana Seitler, Sasha Torres, Candace Vogler, Lisa Wedeen, and Robyn Wiegman read and talked with me about these matters at length, in critical and inspiring ways. Ethan Putterman and Suchi Gururaj provided valuable research aid; Leslie Patterson, Dana Seitler, Gwen Harrigan, Burton Avery, Satre Stulke, and Beatriz Muñoz Santiago performed some arduous clerical and creative archival acts, for which I am very grateful. I must also acknowledge Madeline Matz at the Library of Congress, whose erudition and warmth considerably enriched the making of the archive.

Many of these chapters have previously been published in some form. I thank boundary 2 (especially Don Pease, Jonathan Arac, Paul Bové, and the great editor Meg Sachse); Public Culture (especially Carol Breckenridge and Arjun Appadurai); Feminist Studies (especially Rayna Rapp and Judy Gardiner); American Literature (especially Cathy Davidson and Michael Moon); Cary Nelson; and Dilip Gaonkar. I also thank Beth Freeman for (permission to include) our collaborative work, “Queer Nationality.” Ken Wissoker was an inspired and patient editor. As were the attending editors of Series Q (Jonathan Goldberg, Michael Moon), whose feedback was acute and motivational.

Finally, the Queen is dedicated to four beloved people of great genius whose liveness gives substance to all my optimism: Michael Warner, Laura Kipnis, Katie Stewart, Roger Rouse.
