

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

I am always indebted to encouraging, supportive, and critical readers of my work; they see things that I don't see and push me to make it better. Friends and colleagues who have suggested sources, read, questioned, or otherwise engaged with this work include Fiona Black, Michael Casey, Elizabeth Castelli, Oona Eisenstadt, Adrienne Gibb, Jennifer Glancy, Jione Havea, Maude Gleason, Chris Guzaitis, Andrew Jacobs, Janet Jakobsen, Zayn Kassam, Karen King, Scott Kline, Jennifer Knust, Aaron Kunin, John Kutsko, Carleen Mandolfo, Ian Moyer, Todd Penner, Tina Pippin, Kathleen Skerrett, Yvonne Sherwood, Darryl Smith, Althea Spencer Miller, Lesleigh Cushing Stahlberg, Chloë Taylor, Kyla Tompkins, Andrew Wilson, Vincent Wimbush, and Caroline Vander Stichele. I greatly appreciate the gifts of time, energy, and intellect that these colleagues have given me. The members of my writing group at Pomona College have been instrumental in motivation and feedback, as well as being inspiring in their own work and writing: Anne Dwyer, Pardis Mahdavi, Dara Regaignon, and Tomás Summers Sandoval. Their friendship, scholarship, and political savvy make life so much better. My colleagues in the department of Religious Studies at Pomona College—Oona Eisenstadt, Jerry Irish, Zayn Kassam, Zhiru Ng, and Darryl Smith—have been incredibly supportive of me in every way and have engaged thoughtfully and insightfully on many levels. Our administrative assistant, Vicki Hiraes, is a friend and a huge support in administrative tasks and creating a wonderful work environment.

A number of other friends and colleagues in Southern California have provided important intellectual community: Pam Bromley, Eileen Cheng, Vin de Silva, Karen Derris, Vince Faraone, Bob Gaines, Stephan Garcia, Erin Gratz, Chris Guzaitis, Ko Honda, Gizem Karaali, Peter Kung, April Mayes, Carol Ockman, Anne Pandey, Amit Pandey, Masha Prokopenko, Greg Regaignon, Val Thomas, Peggy Waller, the Lincoln Park book club, and United Voices of Pomona.

Several editors of earlier versions of the chapters were instrumental in getting me writing, and they offered incredibly helpful ideas and feedback: J. J. Collins, Noreen Giffney, Myra Hird, Charles Mathewes, Stephen Moore, and Mayra Rivera. Earlier versions of the ideas developed here appear as: "Empire's Allure: Babylon and the Exception to Law in Two Conservative Discourses," Journal of the American Academy of Religion 77 (3) 2009: 680–711; "Tolerating Babel: The Bible, Film, and the Family in U.S. Biopolitics," Religious Studies and Theology 29 (2) 2010: 143–69; "Disco-Reggae at Abu Ghraib: Music, the Bible, and Torture," Religion Dispatches, June 22, 2009; "Torture by the Book: On the Bible and 'Enhanced Interrogation Techniques,'" The Ecumenist 46 (4) 2009: 16–18; "Queering the Beast: The Antichrists' Gay Wedding," in Queering the Non-Human, ed. Noreen Giffney and Myra Hird, 97–110, Aldershot: Ashgate, 2008; "Detranscendentalizing Decisionism: Political Theology after Gayatri Spivak," Journal of Feminist Studies in Religion 25 (2) 2009: 67–85; "Effects of Grace: Detranscendentalizing," in Planetary Loves: Spivak, Postcoloniality, and Theology, ed. Stephen D. Moore and Mayra Rivera, 225–37, New York: Fordham University Press, 2011. I am grateful to Joe Marchal and Jay Twomey for their helpful and affirming reviews of the full manuscript. I am thankful to my editors and the staff at Fordham University Press, Helen Tartar, Tom Lay, Eric Newman, and Katie Sweeney, whose work I value and appreciate very much. I thank Teresa Jesionowski and Katrina Van Heest for their outstanding copyediting.

I also thank Hannah Crumme, Steven Mears, James Page, Leah Rediger Schulte, and Katrina Van Heest for their valuable research assistance at various points in the process. I especially thank Rina Sadun, who was a phenomenal research assistant for almost two years and whose efficiency and ability at tasks large and small were appreciated beyond measure. Students whose insights I have included and noted are Zev Gurman and Emily Marantz. Former graduate students, and now scholars in their own rights, Tom Crawford, Jacqueline Hidalgo, Richard Lindsay, and Katrina Van Heest have also been important in pushing my thinking on scripturalization, many of them in their work with the Institute for Signifying Scriptures at Claremont Graduate University.

The first proposal for the book was done on a summer research stipend from the Wabash Center for Teaching and Learning in Theology and Religion. My “ten-year” Wabash cohort and facilitators have been a bastion of wisdom and a source of pedagogical inspiration and learning. I also thank Pomona College for generous research funding on several occasions.

Finally, this book would not have seen the light of day without the persistent encouragement and mentoring of Elizabeth Castelli, who is a model of academic brilliance, erudition, and generosity. She has tirelessly read, commented on, and advocated for this project in its many forms. Likewise, my partner, Michael Casey, has been encouraging at every stage; he has given feedback on multiple drafts, discussed ideas, kept me up to speed on life and the world, encouraged me to take breaks with RR&P (the critter crew) or in the gym, and, in short, has helped make this book more complex and also more readable.

This page intentionally left blank