

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Undertaking over one hundred years of the Regina Public Library's history would not have been possible without the generosity of past and present record keepers. We are especially indebted to Keith Foster for bringing alive the first chief librarian, Mr. Honeyman; Marjorie Dunlop, for her story of the library's transition from the early years to the modern era; and Gary Deane, for his exploration of the nature of a man, Chief Librarian Ron Yeo, who brought the library to the forefront of North American libraries.

Editors are indebted to the work of our diligent researcher, Bob Ivanochko, for his review of all Regina Public Library Board minutes since the library's founding in 1908, and for his work documenting the Honeyman years of the library and early Regina Public Library Board members.

Thanks to Dana Turgeon of the City of Regina Archives, to May P. Chan, Sharon Maier, and Warren James of the Prairie History Room for assistance with research, and to the Provincial Archives of Saskatchewan.

We recognize the historical context provided on the Carnegie library building by Marg Hryniuk and on the "new" modernist library architecture by Bernard Flaman, the personal history of public libraries by Manchester-born Nick Ruddick, and the history of libraries by Lorne Beug. In addition, Randy Widdis and Ian McWilliams prepared a detailed analysis of the relationship between the city's population history and the public library, and Merrilee Rasmussen compiled a document about the fight to save the library from closures in 2003–2004. While these documents are not included in this volume, they were important in providing context and depth for the editors, and both remain a valued part of the collection of the Regina Public Library History Project.

Essays and other contributions by former and present RPL employees provided “on the ground” information: former Dunlop directors, Helen Marzolf, Wayne Morgan, and Peter White; and former and current librarians and library workers, Maureen Woods, Dorothy Hayden, Ken Aitken, Sharon Maier, May P. Chan, Kathy Valaitis, Mary Love, Faye Rafter, Susan Dugas, Diana Chabros, Audrey Prendergast, Ann Stuart, Anna Mann, Wenda McArthur, Anna Nalewany, Janet Craig, Jason Hammond, Belinda New, Marilyn Webb, Bev Antal, Gary Deane, Brian Stockton, and Mark Wihak.

Citizens provided their appreciation of library services: artists Terry Fenton and Margaret Bessai; and writers Bill Barry, Trevor Herriot, Terry Rigelhof, and Carle Steel.

Thanks to researcher Lindsay Thorimbert for his interviews with Bernard Vander Ziel, Charles Ottosen, Olivia Shumski, Jane Grigg, Pam Johnson, Warren James, Anna Mann, Ann Stuart, Susan Sebo, and Wendy Sinclair, and for his essays on branch libraries and booktrailers.

Thanks to the many interviewed over the years for the project; there would not be a book without them: former RPL board members Merrilee Rasmussen, Gerry Kleisinger, Sally McCallian, Lorne Harasen; former chief librarian Ken Jensen; RPL retirees group members Fred Wright, Nelda MacKay, Anne Campbell, Ann Stuart, Jere Turner, Mabel Jones, Rosemary Oddie, Alice Willison (Jessop), Fran Yurotsky, and Ashburn Johnson; current and former CUPE 1594 members Gloria Quinton Cuddington, Donna Holmes, Alice Frederick, Betty Pickering, Jim Hall, and Faye Rafter; former Dunlop director Wayne Morgan; former Dunlop Art Gallery workers Joyce Clark, Jack Severson, Suzanne Posyniak, and Bev Antal; former librarians Maureen Woods, John Edgar, Luella Newman, Joanne Allen, and André Gagnon; former and present Literacy co-ordinators Sarah Landy, June Waffle, and Alice Samkoe; former and present Outreach staff Tony Neal, Patti-Lynne McLeod, and Jan Jordan; and RPL's first graphic artist, Deborah Sures.

Thank you to the Regina community for their interest in, and support of, this project: Steve Wolfson and Penny Ward of Wolf Sun Productions for videotaping interviews and producing a short video; Gordon Goddard for sharing his collection of historic postcards; Jocelyn Mohr for transcribing interviews and administrative work; Harwood Truscott for scanning RPL Kodachrome slides; Loraine Thompson, as well as two anonymous peer readers, for reviewing the manuscript and providing helpful suggestions; and Coteau Books for the donation of A Book in Every Hand: Public Libraries in Saskatchewan, by Don Kerr.

We wish to thank Library Director Jeff Barber and the Regina Public Library Board for support throughout the project. We are grateful to Jeff Barber for his essay on the future of RPL, which concludes our book.

Thanks to the Friends of the Regina Public Library for initiating the Regina Public Library History Project, to Joanne Havelock for research, Jim Elliott for financial administration of the grants which funded this book, and long-time RPL librarian Ann Stuart for providing advice and insight.

With deep gratitude, we would like to thank the project funders: the Regina Public Library; Creative Saskatchewan, Creative Industries Production Grant; Ministry of Parks, Culture and Sport, Building Pride Program; Saskatchewan Arts Board; and the Saskatchewan Heritage Foundation.
