

Publisher's Note

This publication is the result of a collaboration between Čegá K'įna Nakóda Oyáde / Carry The Kettle Nakoda First Nation and the University of Regina Press, with assistance from Twin Rivers Consulting, led by James Tanner. It stems from a previously published land use study, Carry the Kettle Nakota First Nation: Historical and Current Traditional Land Use Study. This book uses first-hand accounts and interviews, as well as much intensive research into the archives, to help record the true story of the Čegá K'įna Nakóda Oyáde.

University of Regina Press would like to acknowledge and express gratitude to the Elders of Carry The Kettle Nakoda First Nation, and to Chief Elsie Jack, for asking us to be a part of telling their stories. University of Regina Press would also like to acknowledge and express gratitude to Dr. David Miller, former professor of Indigenous Studies at the First Nations University of Canada, for his tireless efforts and commitments to the press and to Nakoda Peoples and history. He has spent his life devoted to his research, and this book would not have happened without him. Also, a special thank-you to University of Regina Press editorial intern Jellyn Ayudan, who helped compile many of the original sources and citations.

Finally, we want to respectfully acknowledge the recent discovery of residential school student bodies throughout the country, including those children lost from the Čegá K'įna Nakóda Oyáde. University of Regina Press remains committed to purposeful action and will continue to respond to the Calls of Action set forward by the Truth and Reconciliation Commission.
