The completion of A Dictionary of 20th-Century Communism would not have been possible without essential contributions by several people, most especially Luigi Tomba. He put his considerable expertise to work for us, and his help in the area of Asian communism was invaluable. We would also like to thank Alberto Filippi, an indispensable and generous collaborator in the area of Latin American communism. Michele Luzzatto followed the project from its planning phases to its completion, and was always available to share in the resolution of problems and difficulties with great lucidity. Gianluca Fiocco performed the important task of reading and editing the contributions in a critical spirit. Anna Farcito contributed her competence and experience to the entries' final editing. Marco Del Bufalo corrected various errors. Rosalba Provantini and Paola Rodinò also provided timely and invaluable assistance. The editors wish to thank them all sincerely, while taking full responsibility for the work's perspectives, choices, and characteristics.
