This book is a translation of Théories et Réalités en Droit International Public,
first published in 1953
by Editions A. Pedone, Paris.
It incorporates most of the changes made between the first and second French editions,
and thus is substantially the same as the second.

Charles De Visscher's career includes service as counsel and arbiter in international disputes, as minister in and representative of the Belgian Government, as president of the Institute of International Law, and as judge of the International Court of Justice. He is now professor at the University of Louvain. P. E. Corbett is research associate in international studies at Princeton University.
