

Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction: What Tradition Tells, Tradition Wanted: Subjects That Matter	1

PART I HETEROGENEITY

Chapter 1	Objects Behaving Like Subjects: Because We're Way Past the Post	21
Chapter 2	Without Sacrifice, Without Vengeance: The Postcolonial Adorno	37
Chapter 3	Europe as an Other: Subalternity, Postcolonial Theory, and Philosophers of the Future	49
Chapter 4	The Second Sex: Philosophy, Feminism, and the Race for Theory	71
Chapter 5	Hit-Take, Hit-Alliance: Paradigmatically Postcolonial and Exemplarily Western	87

PART II THE RESURRECTION OF THE FLESH

Chapter 6	I Am an Animal: Time, Cruelty, and Metaphysics	105
Chapter 7	The (M)other of All Posts: Postcolonial Melancholia in the Anthropocene	121

Chapter 8	Compulsory Rationality in the Economics of Empire: Sati, Always Sati	133
Chapter 9	Sacred Texts, Sacred Deaths: For Family Women	151
Chapter 10	Wagging Fingers and Missing Dicks: An Updated Grammar Book (Race, Gender, and the Animal in the Age of Global Warming)	165
Conclusion:	Three Women's Texts and a Critique of Imperialism 2.0: An Aesthetic Education and the Planetary Imperative	179
Coda		193
Notes		195
Bibliography		231
Index		245