

Acknowledgments

To get from concept to manuscript takes much energy, time, thinking, and most of all support, encouragement, and nurturing. This is done with the help of many individuals too numerous to mention. These include colleagues and peers, friends and families. I am indebted to them all, but am responsible for the final version.

Thank you to the University of Liverpool for giving me research leave in 2011 to carry out interviews and research in Mexico City and for the award of a Santander Grant in 2015 to complete my research in Mexico. To the staff at the libraries at the University of Liverpool for their support in sourcing material and those at Liverpool John Moores University at IM Marsh for the space to complete the writing and editing.

Thank you to Ana García Bergua for her support and sharing her contacts with me so that I could interview individuals who otherwise were unavailable. Thank you to Nelson Carro of Cineteca Nacional de México in Mexico City for being generous with his time, insights, and expertise. To Elides Pérez Bistrain, Genoveva García Rojas, and the rest of the staff at the Centro de documentación at the Cineteca Nacional de México in Mexico City for finding what I needed and directing me to materials that only the archivists know connect to each other.

As a work in progress over years of thinking, presenting, writing, and conversations this has been the product of many conference papers, blog posts, and the insights and questions of others. Sometimes they've been the result of me trying out my ideas in the world and realizing where they don't always make sense to others. I appreciated all of those responses because they helped make this better. Thanks to those who have read and given considered feedback on drafts including Victoria McCollum. Any mistakes are mine, but the feedback has made it better. Thank you to the two anonymous readers who were brilliant critical friends. Their insights helped me to refine this manuscript.

Thank you to the supportive series editors, Ignacio Sánchez-Prado and Lesley Marsh, and to the editorial staff at State University of New York Press including John Raymond for his attention to detail, Ryan Morris and Fran Keneston for their support, and to Rebecca Colesworthy for her positive, careful, and always cheerful guidance throughout the process, but, particularly, as the manuscript was being shepherded through its final stages.

Thanks a million times over to Liz Greene, for her attentive and patient reading of multiple versions and revisions, and always being a supportive editor and critical friend, when it was much needed, and for nurturing me and giving me much love. All this and more made conceptualizing, writing, and finishing this project possible. Without that unstinting, unwavering, and unassailable support, work, and patience, none of this would have been possible.

To Marmaduke and Rua, because distraction is needed to keep me sane. To Dario, just because.
