

Contents

|                                                                                                                                                    |     |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| List of Illustrations                                                                                                                              | ix  |
| Acknowledgments                                                                                                                                    | xv  |
| 1 Alton's Paradox                                                                                                                                  | 1   |
| 2 Hollywood, City of Dreams: The First Spanish-Language Film Industry                                                                              | 15  |
| 3 "The Biggest Revelation of Hispanic Cinema": José Mojica's Transnational Stardom                                                                 | 21  |
| 4 Mexico City Dreams: The Emergence of Latin America's Most Important Film Industry                                                                | 61  |
| 5 "The Best We Have in This Forsaken Place": Cinematography and Collaboration in Alex Phillips's Films with Arcady Boytler and Fernando de Fuentes | 69  |
| 6 "But only one, Juan Orol, is fundamentally different from the rest": Orolian Melodrama and cursilería in the 1930s                        | 121 |
| 7 In the Studios of Buenos Aires: The Rise and Fall of Argentina's Film Industry                                                                   | 167 |
| 8 "The Primary Champion of National Film": Ángel Mentasti and the Invention of Argentina Sono Film                                                 | 175 |

|    |                                                                                                                                                       |     |
|----|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| 9  | “A Man Expert in the Needs of the Set”: Tito Davison,an Éminence grise in the Argentine Film Industry of theLate 1930s and Early 1940s | 225 |
| 10 | Foreign Film Workers and the Emergence of IndustrialSound Film in Latin America                                                                   | 253 |
|    | Notes                                                                                                                                                 | 263 |
|    | Bibliography                                                                                                                                          | 335 |
|    | Index                                                                                                                                                 | 345 |