For me, writing a book is more complicated than making wine. The work presented took years to complete, and I'm sure I still left a lot out, but the process was more rewarding than I ever imagined. Unlike writing, winemaking is a team sport; so many people have been involved over the years in helping me create beautiful wines.

First and foremost, none of this would have been possible without my wife and best friend, Nancy, who has accompanied me on my winemaking journey every step of the way. She's my sounding board for new ideas and taste tester for every one of my creations. Without her constant love and support, I don't think I'd be here today.

Several other people deserve my heartfelt thanks:

Lyle Greenfield, who took a chance on a twenty-two-year-old kid and let me run his vineyard and winery in Bridgehampton. He saw someone who wanted to learn, grow, and succeed in the wine business. He always believed in me and pushed me to be the best I could be. He also helped me with the title of this book.

Trent Preszler, CEO of Bedell Cellars and our owner Ninah Lynne, who encourage my winemaking journey at Bedell and continue to believe in me, providing me with the support and creative freedom to make great wines and explore the complexities of our terroir. I can't imagine a better place to make wine.

Marin Brennan, my greatest student and protégé to whom I leave my legacy of winemaking, and my loyal and dedicated cellar staff, who always lift me up and continue to make me proud. Without their assistance during this past year, I wouldn't have been able to complete this manuscript.

Carlo DeVito, an accomplished author, and winemaker in his own right, who put in the good word for me at SUNY Press and sent me on my writing journey. I don't think this book would have happened without his support.

Stephen Mudd, for giving me my first job in a vineyard and teaching me what vines need to succeed on the North Fork, making the most out of every vintage. I not only learned how to grow wine, but I also gained a brother.

Larry Perrine and Alice Wise, for pushing growers and winemakers to be the best they could be through thoughtful research and investigation, helping to make Long Island the world-class wine region it is today. In the process of adding to my intellectual development, they became my lifelong friends.

Many thanks to everyone on the SUNY Press team who helped me make this book a reality, especially Richard Carlin, Susan Geraghty, and Céline Parent for their expert guidance.

Finally, to all those who have played a large part in my journey and are no longer with us: Michael Lynne, Jonathan Lynne, Don Cavaluzzi, David Mudd, Jack Petrocelli, Paul Pontallier, Ben Sisson, and Donna Rudolph.

My greatest wish in writing this book is to help people understand the unique beauty of the North Fork and the wines that are made there.
