

Acknowledgements

There are many people who have contributed to this book getting written. I am sure, in the process of thanking people, there will be some who I forget and for that I ask their forgiveness. As a supervisor and mentor who has worked with me since I was a postgraduate student I would like to thank Jane Duckett. Other members of staff who supported me during my time at Glasgow include Barry O'Toole, Cian O'Driscoll, Alasdair Young, Chris Thornton and Tom Lundberg. Heather Zhang and Myrto Tsakatika not only gave my PhD thesis a thorough examination but have also helped me develop as a scholar and researcher in the years since. Colleagues in the PhD process who provided invaluable support and friendship (and continue to do so) include Sam Robertshaw, James Bilsland, Scott Brown, Donghyun Kim, Tom Johnson, Poppy Winanti, Wang Guohui, Aofei Lu, Valentina Feklyunina, Chris Lamont, Wang Hua and Ariel Ko.

While conducting research in China I have been fortunate to work with and get to know several scholars, without them I wouldn't have been able to complete this work, and for that I thank Guan Xinping, Yang Tuan and Tang Jun. I would like to extend special thanks to Wang Fei, Wang Jing and Chen Xi for their support and friendship.

My research has been funded over the years by the Universities China Committee in London, the University of Glasgow and the University of Edinburgh. Without the funds to travel and stay in China I would not have been able to complete the research that formed the basis of this book.

In the time since I completed my PhD I have benefited from working at the University of Edinburgh where I am surrounded by colleagues in Asian Studies who have all helped me to complete this book. Thank you to Julian Ward, Joachim Gentz, Natascha Gentz, Christopher Rosenmeier, Mark McLeister and Huang Xuelei for providing a genuinely pleasant place in which to work. I would like to thank Chris Perkins in particular for his friendship and for making sure I got this book written.

I have also been fortunate enough to benefit from the advice and guidance of a number of China scholars who, in their own ways, have had a profound impact on how I view my research and work. In particular, I would like to thank Dorothy Solinger and Tim Wright.

Edinburgh University Press and the four reviewers whose suggestions have been worked into the text all have my thanks for their patience and hard work.

I have been lucky in that I have a family which has supported me throughout my time as a student and an early career researcher. For their love and support I would like to thank my parents Judith and Phil, my brother and sister Matthew and Sarah, my grandparents Doreen, Hilda, Ron and Peter, and uncles Steve, David and Martin. For making sure I get out of the house, get a walk and clear my head, thank you to Junior, Lily and Ludo.

Finally, I have been blessed to spend the last nine years of my life with Senia Febrica. Thank you.
